In a year when man circled the moon, when computers counted votes only hours after they were cast in a historically close election, when restless minority groups continued seeking to achieve a feeling of equality, when commuters raced daily to catch trains to and from work, when people turned to mass-communication media which could lightly satirize the problems of the hectic pace of contemporary society; in such a year it was evident that speed marks modern life.

Nation's pace reflected in speed of LT

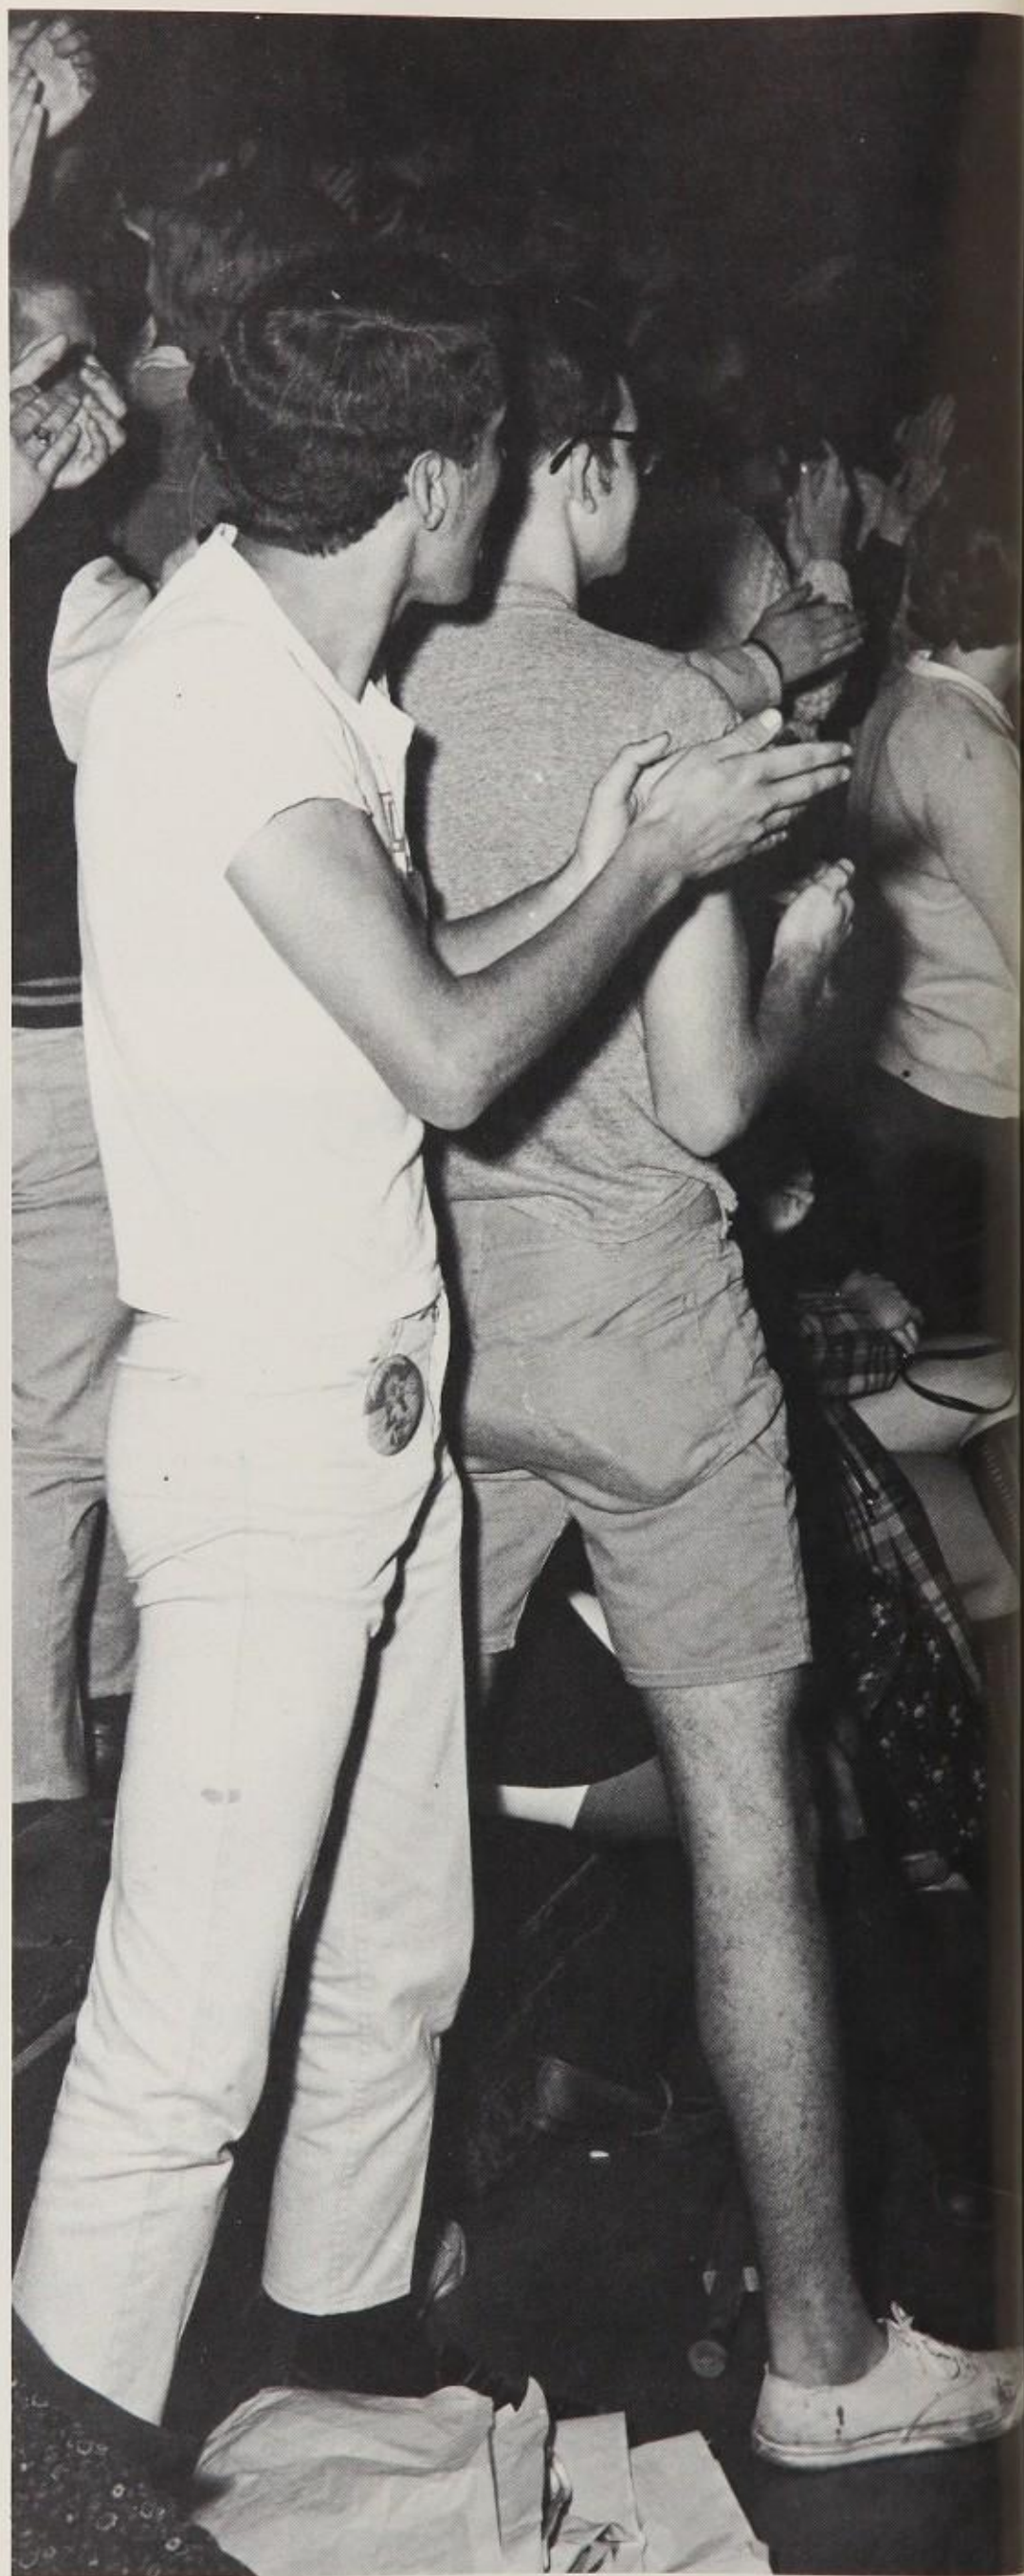

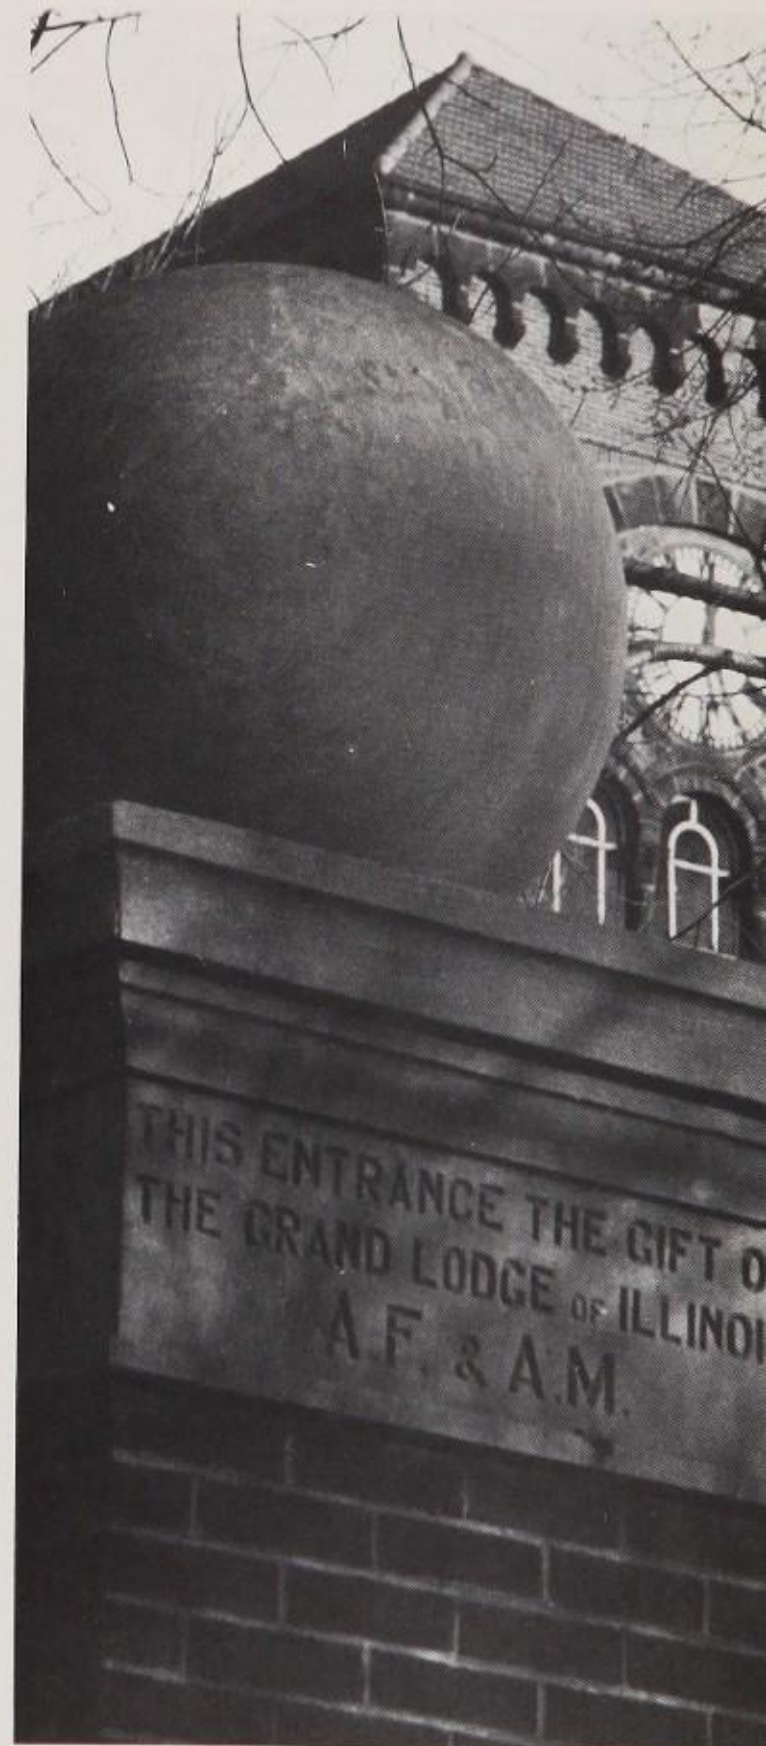

All over the country, students rushed to school and from one class to another. A multitude of extra-curricular activities provided the chance to explore as many areas of interest as time permitted. Quiet moments became increasingly rare and more appreciated. LT is much like any other school with the added chaos of construction workers striving to complete new facilities and students and faculty members attempting to communicate between split campuses. Speed marks LT.

Speed of LT hastens students maturity

STUDENT

Speed marks the daily routine of LT students. In addition to the normal load of classroom work, pupils have the opportunity to join a variety of extra-curricular activities. Squeezing three meetings into one afternoon is the consequence of extensive participation. Rehearsals for a musical or a dramatic production can last for hours in search of the right effect from performers. On the other hand, after-school employment provides funds but somewhat limits the amount of involvement in school and community functions. Weekends provide little relief from the hectic pace, with a multitude of church and social activities, and even planning sessions for club officers and committees. However the student spends his time, his activities enrich his academic efforts in a total learning experience.

“All the World’s a Stage” for Shakespearean homecoming

A fenceful of apprehensive LT fans press to see if their football team has won another first down.

Another float maneuvers into position a few minutes before the Homecoming parade begins.

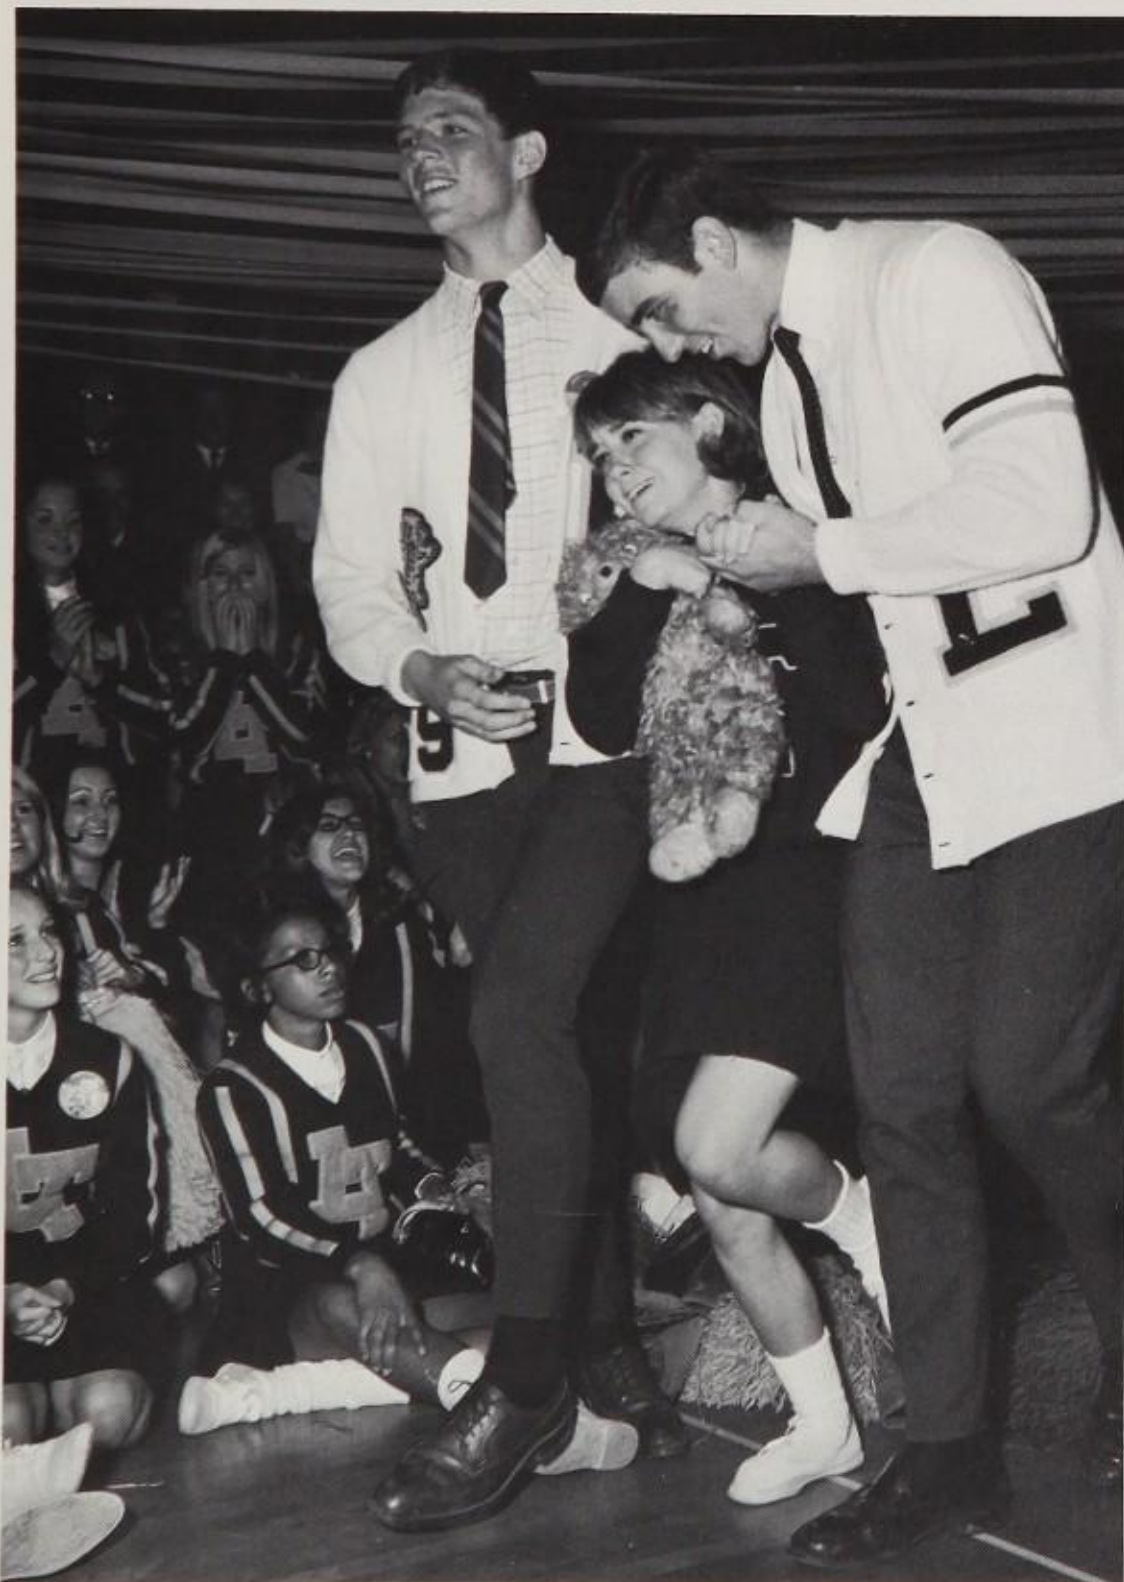

Welcoming the Class of 1944 in Shakespearean style, LT observed “All the World’s a Stage,” Homecoming ’69. Throughout the week, Student Council committee members were busy selling 10¢ plots of the newly-dedicated Bennett Stadium. In a race among the classes, the sophomores demonstrated their spirit by buying the most plots to win part of the homecoming profits. After a day of energetic float-building, students and alumni crowded into the Vaughan Gym, Friday night for the pep assembly, “Much Ado About Something,” where Queen Debi Allen and her court, Kathy Nimetz, Kathy Hamblin, Jody Balaban, and Fran Davis were announced. After the snake dance to the Corral, float-building continued late into the night.

On Saturday morning, the parade followed a new route ending up at South Campus and Bennett Stadium where the Corral, GAA, and Home Economics Club were awarded prizes for the best floats in their divisions. The most crucial event of the weekend was the football game which found the RB Bulldogs beaten by the LT Lions.

The week of memories was brought to a close at “Twelfth Night,” the homecoming dance, climaxing an action-packed weekend.

With Seniors bursting into shrieks and applause, the first member of the queen's court is announced at the wild Homecoming pep rally.

An overly-cuddled teddy bear and a whispered word of congratulations from Cliff Halpin as he and Tom Toolson escort her to the stage, add to Kathy Nimetz's joy as she's announced 1st runner-up on Homecoming court.

Well-stuffed Noil proudly wobbles his way into the parking lot following his ride past hundreds of his fans.

At the shouted identity of the queen, unleashed excitement, joy, and enthusiasm explode through a dam of pre-announcement tension.

Momentarily slowed by RB defenders, Brad Schwartz struggles determinedly up field.

Shoulder to shoulder, senior boys team up to make their float a solid entry.

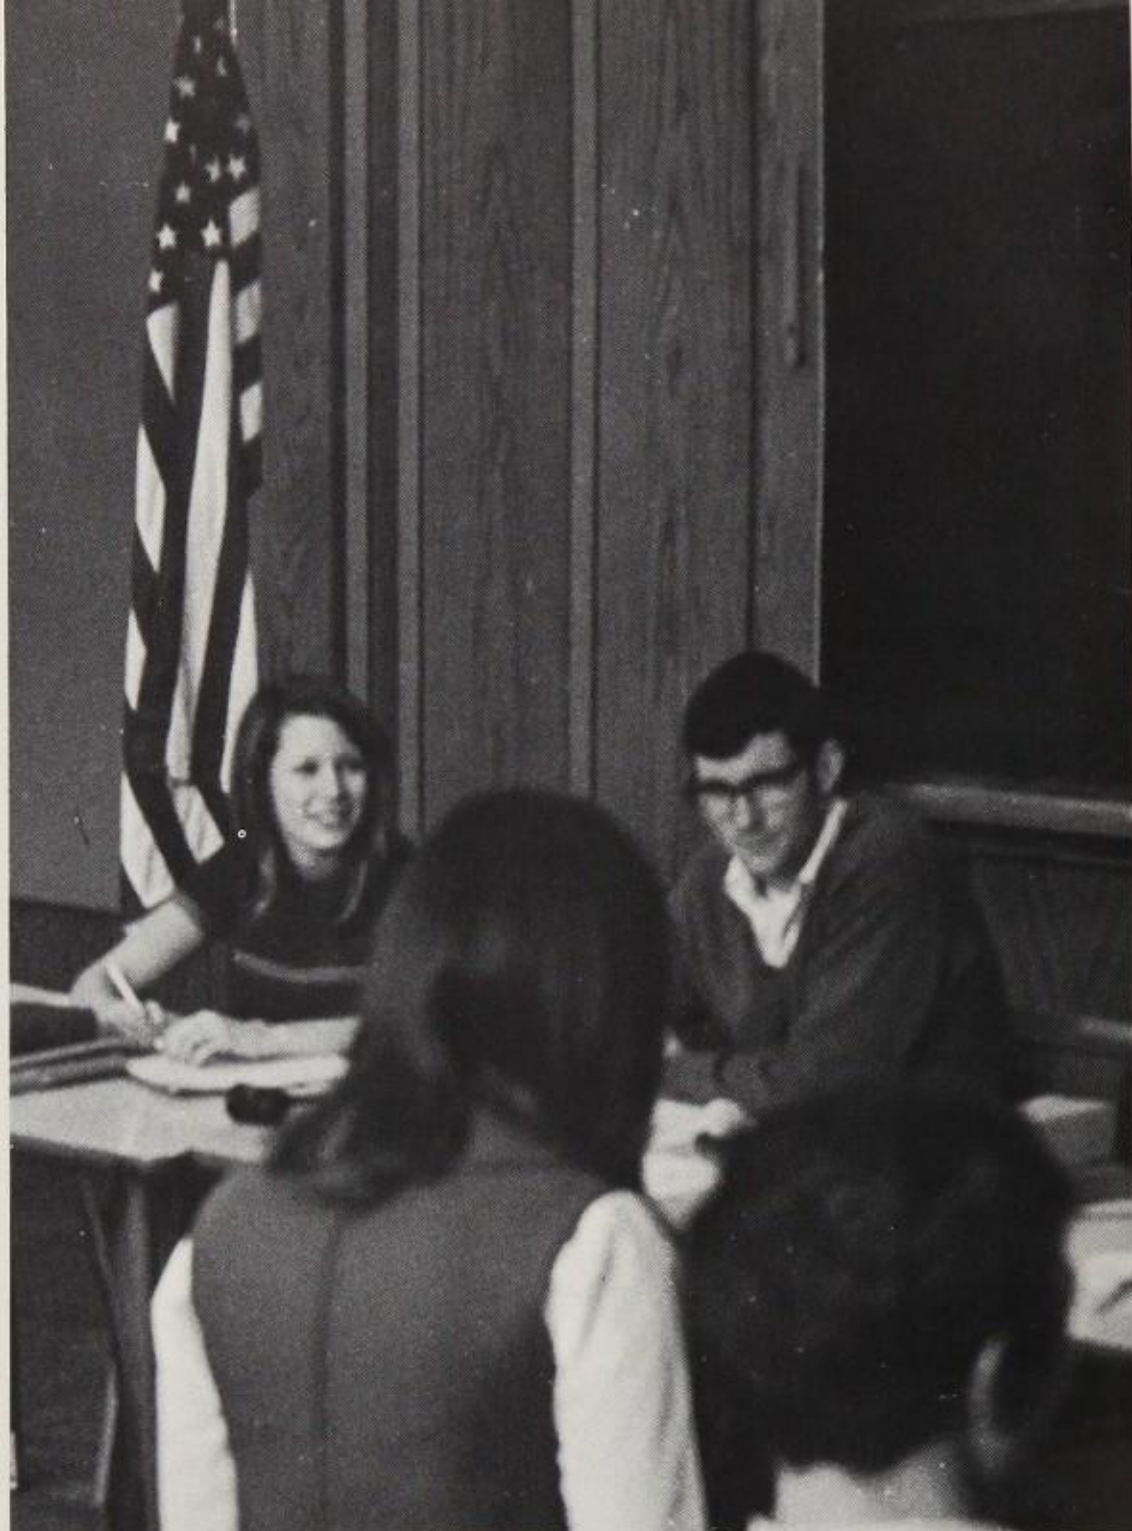

After a hectic football game, Homecoming celebrants enjoy the pleasantly relaxed atmosphere of the Homecoming Dance.

Striving for greater school unity in a year long campaign, Student Council headed various activities for school participation.

Homecoming '69 led the way with the sale of Bennett field plots. Profits made from the sale helped to pay for the Homecoming weekend, and the project was later LT's contribution to the district council's Hall of Ideas. A workshop held by the council officers and class board stressed leadership qualities. Similar discussions were held to bring together members of conflicting groups to provide a place for students to voice dissatisfaction. The annual Christmas dance at Melody Mill climaxed the semester's activities.

Emphasizing student participation, the Student Council committees were made up of any students interested in serving on a particular committee. These committees undertook such activities as painting the North Campus cafeterias, making banners to announce athletic and social events, providing food for football and basketball games, organizing elections, and planning tutoring sessions.

To Student Council members Monday afternoon means confronting and discussing school spirit, new committees, and the managing of student activities.

Rep. Assembly reviews dress code, represents comm classes

This year, Representative Assembly tried a new approach to increase interest among the two hundred communications rooms at both North and South Campuses. A set of questions was sent to each of the representatives to be discussed in their respective comm. rooms. At the beginning of the year, a workshop was set up for all representatives to improve or advance their leadership and to help them learn to arouse the attention of the communication rooms.

The group experimented with changes in the dress code. A girl and a boy from each class, elected by the assembly, as well as teachers and parents were on a committee to discuss revising the dress code.

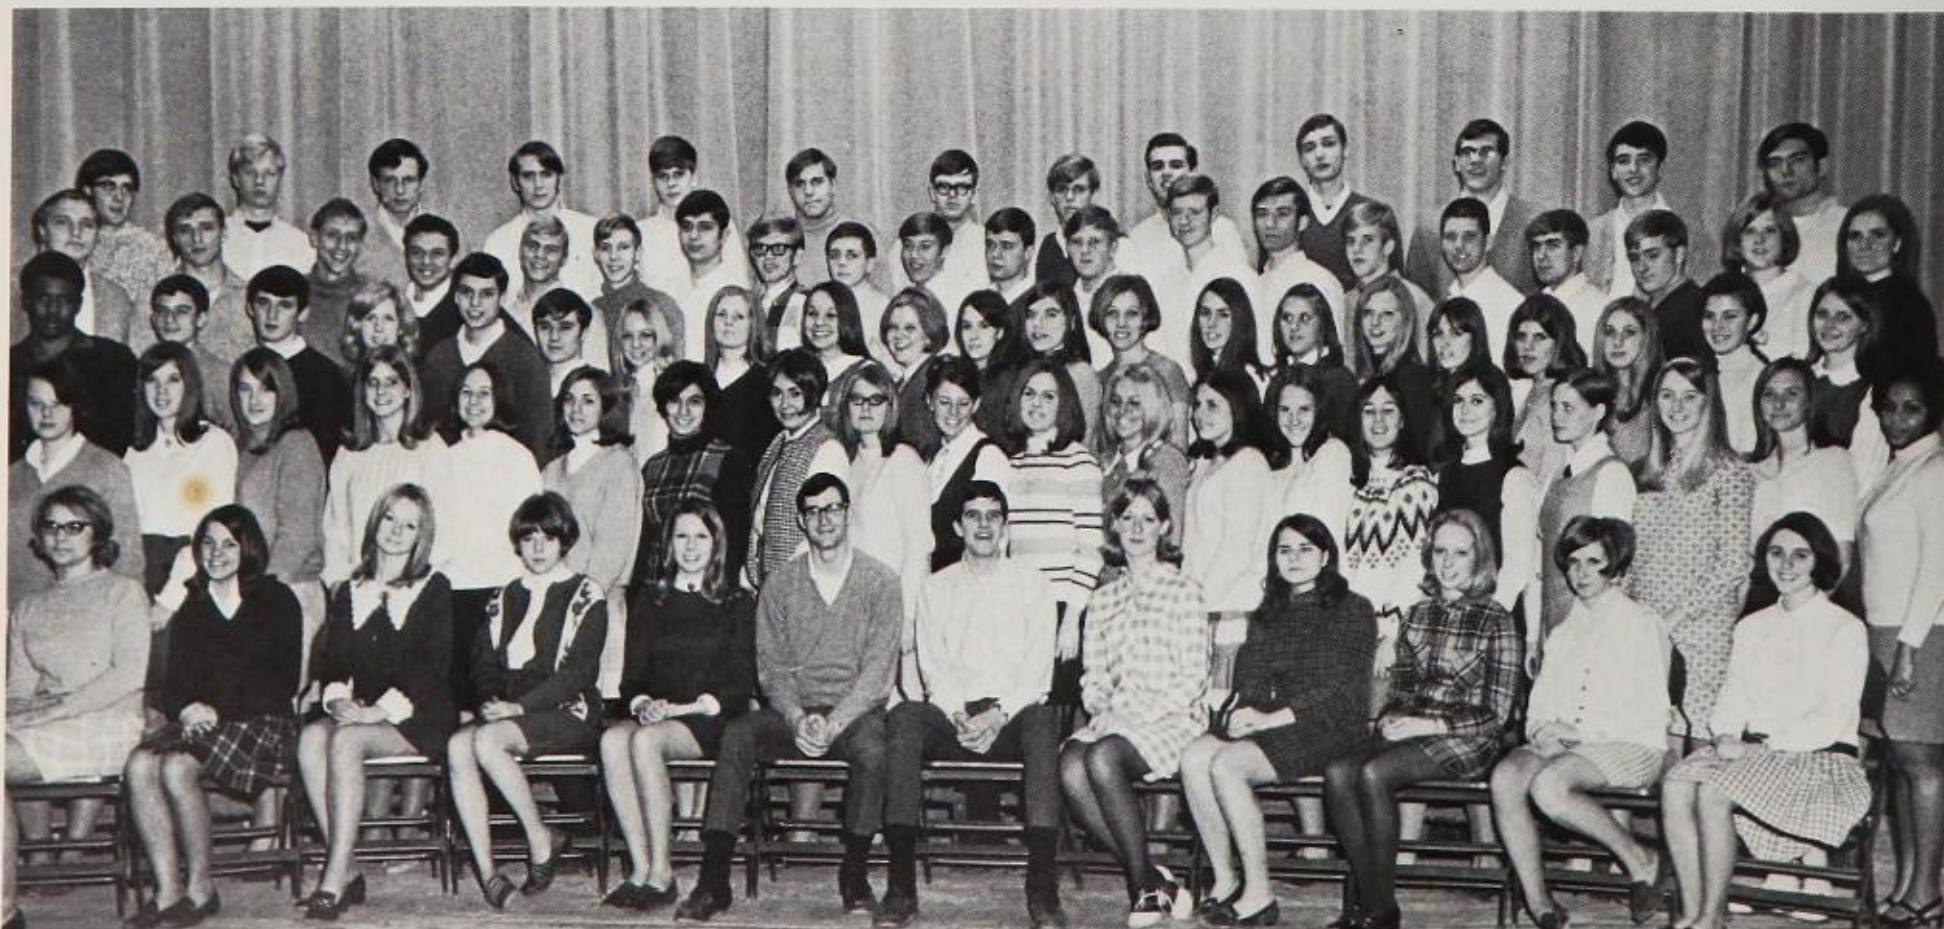

The assembly considered adopting a new process which was being tried out by the sophomore class board. In this plan, students would petition to be on representative assembly then would be placed in comm. rooms in September. Representative assembly also participated in promoting the adoption of the Freshman Amendment.

Rep. Assembly members listen to Rick Shepro's comments about the Foreign Relations Committee activities—a report which they will soon share with their comm groups.

Bus. Management provides oases for sports audiences

Students attending basketball and football games once again benefited from the efforts of the Business Management Committee. Ten to twenty students, including more freshmen than ever before, assisted co-chairmen Barb Norman and Bill Callaway in the selling of refreshments. Sponsors Mr. French Flynn and Mr. Robert Paolicchi solicited members by the reviewing of applications only.

Problems this past year included the restriction of selling popcorn in the new gym and the proper maintenance of temperatures. The committee hopes that in the near future a permanent garage-type stand will be built at Bennett Stadium so that they will be able to provide better service for the spectators.

Reminiscing about good times at LT and anticipating a successful year abroad as a foreign student, Kris Dawkins enjoys a final get-together with friends at an after-school farewell party.

For. Rel. Comm. acquaints LT with AFSers in drive, assemblies, teas

The big word in the Foreign Relations Committee this year was "involvement." All events planned and presented by the committee had the purpose of acquainting Fernando, Katriina and LT students with each other. For the first few months, the students were given a chance to adapt to LT and were then gradually introduced at mixers, parties, discussions, and, formally at the Homecoming Assembly. By Thanksgiving Katriina and Fernando had quite a number of friends, and a tea was held in their honor. A similar tea was presented at Christmas with other schools' foreign students, Small Choir, Christmas treats, and, of course, Santa.

By December 26, speaking privileges were granted to the foreign students and plans for the new year began. The biggest of these plans was the A.F.S. Drive week at the end of January, which introduced a new system of school participation. Next year's foreign students were sold in 4,000 sections for fifty cents each share. To stimulate sales, foreign students from area schools visited and spoke in an assembly at North Campus, and a mixer at South Campus. The last day of the drive was highlighted by a sockhop following the basketball game. Entrance was gained by either fifty cents or a previously-purchased share.

Though Katriina and Fernando were the greatest concern of the foreign relations committee, many other projects were conducted throughout the year as efforts to improve world understanding. In the fall, they collected cookies for the men in Viet Nam and sent them to the platoon of a former LT student. By the end of January, Kris Dawkins was informed of her acceptance as an "Americans Abroad" student.

To chart all former and present foreign students at LT, a new map was set up at each campus which displayed pictures, maps, and the year of their stay at LT.

After a get-acquainted party, Katriina's face reveals her realization that happiness is not limited to one country.

Sharing thoughts, a room, and Beulah, the family cat, form part of Katriina's Americanization.

Well-stocked desk areas lure Katriina and Sally back to tomorrow's school work after dinner.

Smile from “Land of Midnight Sun” brightens LT halls

The idea of having a Finnish foreign student at LT went over quite well—especially with the boys. A year in America was also well received by Katriina Saikkonen, an LT senior from Vaajakorski, Finland. She had heard many things about America from some of her Finnish friends who had visited before, but she had no strong opinions about what life would be like here. Instead, she came to discover for herself what America has to offer. Her conclusions were that LT kids are “really great” and, because of this, she felt she actually became a part of LT. She particularly enjoyed the sports activities and pep assemblies and often found herself involved in such events. After her first assembly at North Campus during which she was introduced, she was both pleased and surprised at the number of kids who came up to her in the halls to say “Hi” though she had never met them.

In general, Katriina found school to be less formal than in Finland and the students to be more concerned with group consent and what other people did. She became interested and involved in our presidential election and found it more exciting, though more commercialized, than in Finland. Though overcoming the language barrier was a minor problem for Katriina, who had studied English for five years, she learned many things here—especially to smile more. Katriina found her year living with Sally Stockbarger and her family very enjoyable, but somehow incomplete—she missed her sauna!

“This year has really taught me much: American History, English, Spanish, and finally, after all, we all live in the same small world, even if we live in U.S.A. or in Finland.”

Geography shows their countries hundreds of miles apart, but in the quiet of a home, Katriina finds a father's warmth and understanding universal.

Blushing at a reference made about her in a club president's introduction, Katriina prepares to acquaint another segment of LT with her homeland.

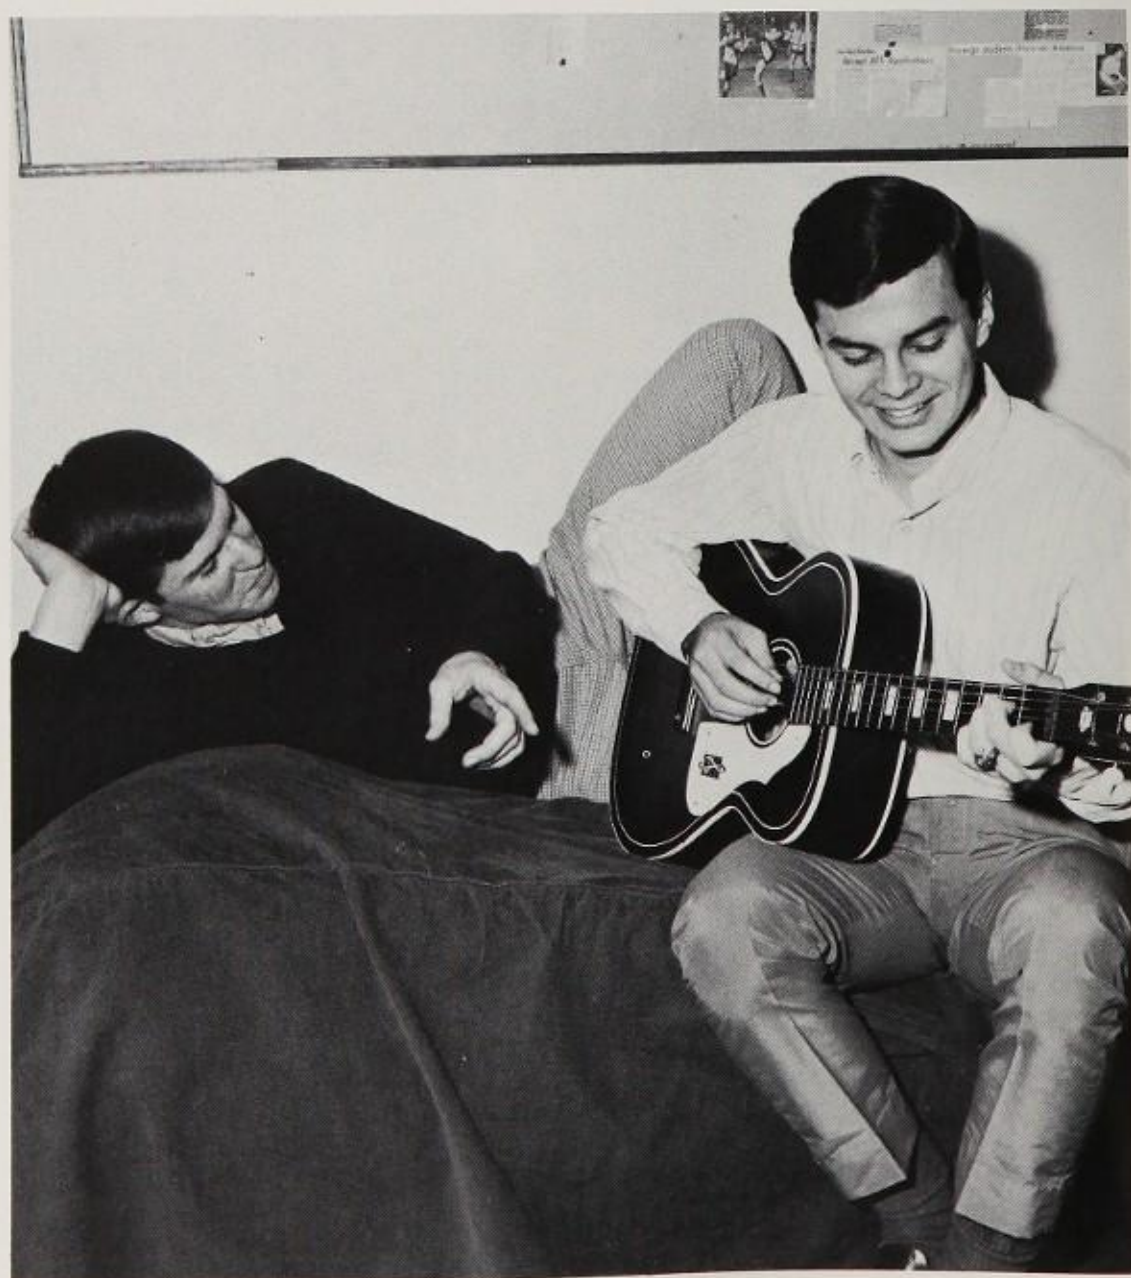

Winter's paraphernalia absorbs Fernando as Pete introduces his South American brother to snow sports equipment.

Fernando keeps busy with soccer, parties, guitar-playing

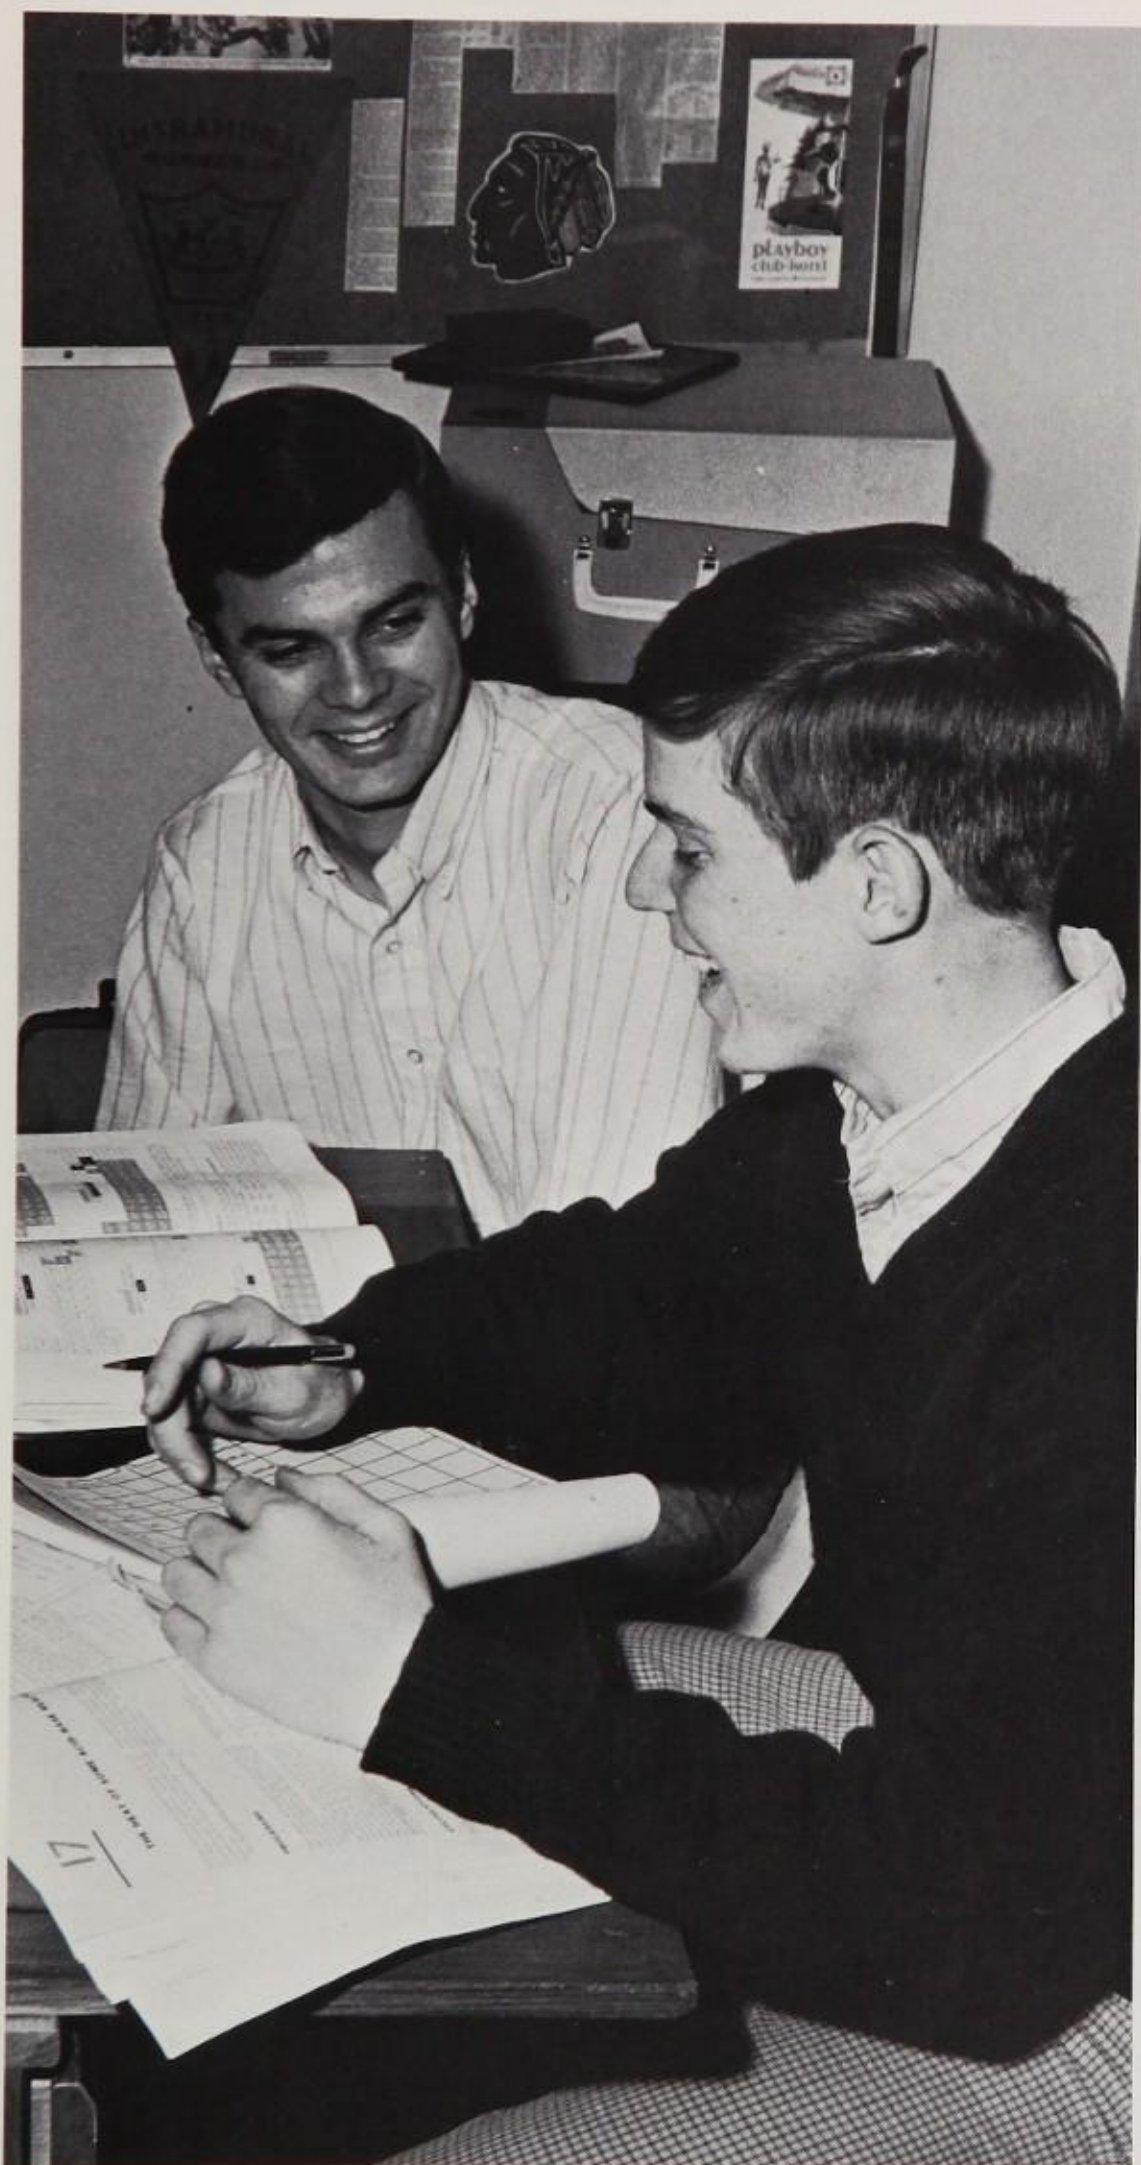

2:30 a.m. on a misty morning late last August found Pete King and his family meeting the bus that brought Fernando Boschini into an unfamiliar world. The 17-year old Guatemalan found his associates at LT and other acquaintances considerably friendlier than he had expected, and he greatly appreciated their efforts to make him feel welcome. Entrance into LT provided Fernando with more surprises. He found the options of course choice available to him differed radically from what he had been accustomed to in Guatemala.

One day in early December Fernando discovered that the pieces of falling sky were snow and soon after, he enjoyed a typically American white Christmas. Throughout the year Fernando found that his greatest problem in living the life of a foreign student was adjusting to America's great pace of activity. Lettermen's Club surprised Fernando with a gift letter sweater earned for his skilled participation on the varsity soccer team. Membership in Lettermen's Club, Folk Music Club, AFS, and Spanish Club left him little time for himself and listening to Simon and Garfunkel, his favorite American recording artists.

When he returns to Latin America in late July, Fernando plans to pursue a career as a doctor after attending college. He will always remember "the freedom in the United States to do whatever you want to do, without people bothering you about it."

An academic necessity, homework, calls Fernando and Pete back to their bedroom study areas.

Displaying the flags of their respective countries, Fernando and his American brother Pete King lend a touch of international brotherhood in the Homecoming Parade.

After dinner, Mr. and Mrs. King relax with Fernando as he shows them a Lion article discussing a successful AFS Drive.

Boasting the largest enrollment and teaching staff in its eight year history, the summer school course Theater Workshop introduced the basics of music, drama, and stagecraft to its one hundred students. Following six weeks of intensive rehearsals, they produced the musical comedy "Once Upon a Mattress," a satire on the well-known fairy tale of the princess and the pea.

Because of construction at North Campus, the students built their own stage in the Vaughn Gym as well as designing and erecting the basic scenery. Props, make-up, costumes, and tickets were also handled by the cast members.

As in previous years, a special feature of the course was a trip to the Stratford Festival in Ontario, Canada. During their four-day stay, the students saw performances of Shakespearean drama and comedy, as well as opera and ballet. The trip and their own final production provided a unique and exciting experience for all participants.

A bedding brigade goes into action to hoist twenty mattresses into the giant frame of Winifred's bed to test her princess-hood by means of a super-sensitivity test using a pea.

A convincing word to Princess Winifred reassures her of her chance of royal acceptance.

Yiddish accents and the unique style of the 1930's seasoned the production of the 1968 Fall Play. Under the direction of Mr. Frank Stacey and his student assistant Elayne Pilant, the cast presented "Enter Laughing," Joseph Stein's comedy of a Jewish boy who thinks he can become an actor without training.

The major problems were to avoid choppy breaks between each of seventeen separate scenes and to establish the tone of the period. The set was constructed on three different levels, each representing one of the basic centers of action: the Kolowitz kitchen, the Marlowe Theater, and Forman's workshop. A backdrop picturing a skyline of New York City brownstone buildings was used to unify the action in the various stage areas. A minimum of necessary scenery was rolled in front of the major set to suggest other locations. Costume committees lowered contemporary hemlines while prop workers searched for a quantity of furniture and old-fashioned sewing machines. Music characteristic of the era was played between scenes and acts to set the mood and allow time for backstage changes. All crews worked together smoothly to complement the final performances of the cast.

Modern dress updates classical drama of Roman establishment

"JULIUS CAESAR" CAST

Brutus	Dave Hasselhoff
Mark Antony	Tom Andersen
Julius Caesar	Tyler Strand
Cassius	Bob Dittman
Calpurnia	Karen Soria Ann Traynor
Portia	Melanie Wilson Sue Schuengel
Casca	Vince Slivka

A secret meeting, the murder of an important government official, and the chaotic reactions of a stunned mob: these are events which sound familiar to a present-day student; but they are in no way unique to our times. Such a conspiracy is seen in "Julius Caesar," Shakespeare's classical drama of revolt with the ranks of the Roman dictatorship, which was presented as this year's Winter Play.

In an attempt to demonstrate the universality of discontent and fickleness within the members of a society, Mr. David Thompson, assisted by Gwen Dawson, directed the Elizabethan play in a contemporary vein. The set consisted of a series of steps and platforms, which gave the scenery a timeless value. Costumes were modern, ranging from suits for Caesar and other members of the Establishment to hippie dress for some of the rebels and mob participants. Collages made of pictures from current magazines were displayed in the foyer and projected onto the back wall of the stage with strange colored lights to give the effect of contemporary "total theater" experiments. In addition to the two evening performances, the cast continued in the tradition of presenting the play for grade school audiences during the week.

Determined to put an end to Caesar's dictatorship, Cassius attempts to entice a still-resolute Brutus to join the conspiracy.

Caesar's murder successfully completed, Cassius compliments his fellow conspirators as they look upon their deed.

The make-up room is the link between student and character, between life and stage.

Live life while you can enjoy it because "You Can't Take It With You." That was the theme presented in the George Kaufman—Moss Hart comedy performed by the underclassmen in this year's South Campus Play. The plot involves a young girl's doubts about the seemingly crazy members of her family when she must introduce them to her inlaws-to-be.

Among the major problems encountered by director Mrs. Judy Holstein and her assistant Mr. Richard Albright was staging the show, which requires a rather large cast, on the limited stage in South Campus' Little Theater. A multitude of props needed to establish the cluttered look necessary to the set of the Sycamore home, many costumes, and the large number of volunteers required for the make-up crew offered many opportunities for those interested in helping with backstage tasks. Although the play has weathered three decades, the universality and variety of emotions displayed by the characters and the warmth of Kaufman—Hart humor make the presentation enjoyable for the enthusiastic audiences which attended the three evening performances.

SC play reveals Sycamore eccentricities

Dude ranch, Mexican hotel are sites of "Girl Crazy" scenes

Kate beams as Zoli, her ex-husband, changes into the aggressive man she's always wanted.

The Hungarian piano player chases his ex-wife nightclub singer, who has her eyes on the television western star turned real-life sheriff, who is after the local postgirl, who agrees to accompany the lawman's agent to Mexico for the annual fiesta. Sound like a re-run of a daytime soap opera set in Dodge City? Well, surprise! It's the plot of George Gershwin's "Girl Crazy," this year's Choir Operetta. The show remains famous for its music, which included "I've Got Rhythm," "Embraceable You," "But Not For Me," and "I'm Biding My Time," which are considered to be among the composer's best.

Leads started after-school rehearsals after Christmas vacation; but a trip to a choral clinic at Illinois State University in February limited time traditionally set aside for chorus work on the annual musical show, and as a result the big production numbers were staged within a month. Illness also cut into rehearsal time and even forced re-casting of one of the major roles. Costumes included casual western attire, a leather-vinyl pantdress, a formal wedding suit with tails, a Mexican waiter's outfit, and a pair of furry chaps. Three backdrops and four stage settings were constructed for the different locations of the story, and major backstage changes occurred before each scene. The pit orchestra, which attended the final weeks of rehearsal, was doubled like the leads to involve as many musicians as possible.

Opinions clash when Johnny is faced with the decision of becoming the local sheriff or going back to the city to star in a TV series.

As Doc and Snake Eyes question him, the information seeps out of intoxicated Sam that he is carrying a large sum of money.

Obirin Show: LT talent showcase, scholarship source

Work and fun merge for Scott Shaw and Jane Taaffe in after-school practice for an Obirin Show spot.

This year for the first time, the profits from the Obirin Show went to finance a scholarship for Obirin Gauken, LT's sister school in Japan. With the help of faculty advisors Mrs. Linda Anderson and Mrs. Joyce Meacham and student organizers Carol Augustine and Karen McLain, director Beth Caithamer brought together AFS members, 160 Committeemen and the cast of forty needed to present the production.

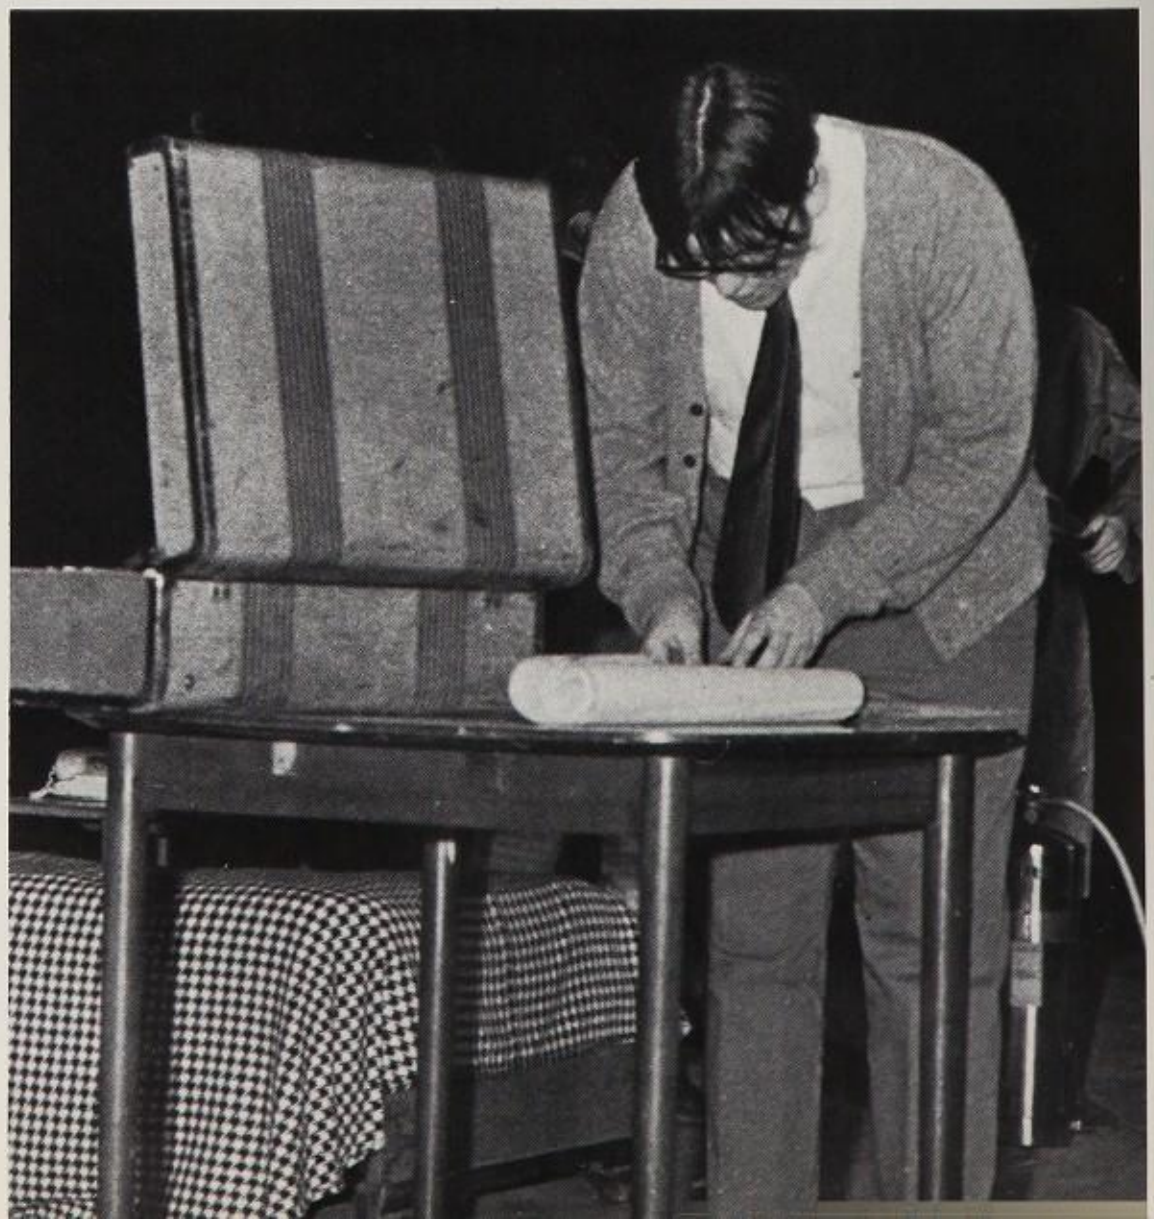

Titled "Everything's Coming Down Shamrocks," the show featured the traditional variety of folk songs, comedy reading, and solo and group dances. Fernando, LT's Guatemalan foreign student, lent his talent and Latin American flair to the musical offerings. An innovation was the incorporation of two one-act plays, "The Still Alarm" and "The Red Carnation," which gave more students a chance to participate. To unify the progression of acts, two emcees, Tom Edgerton and Mike Matthews, offered comment in the style of Rowan and Martin's "Laugh-In."

Cast: Dave Anderson, Carol Augustine, Dan Bardy, Fernando Boschini, Gordon Booth, Kent Bradley, Cheryl Buchta, Cindy Buchta, Barb Burdick, Ginny Clemmens, Sue Davidson, Barb Flaks, Judy Graham, Harvey Green, Debbie Halberstadt, Taylor Hansman, Mary Harvey, Anne Hoffman, John Honeycutt, Deb Kasbeer, Kathy Little, Todd Loats, Jean McWethy, Jim Milio, Marcia Olson, Scott Shaw, Sue Schuengel, Jennifer Smith, Stewart Storm, Corinne Sulima, Tyler Strand, Jane Taaffe, Jann Thunack, Ann Traynor, Debby Tucci.

Deb Halberstadt comments on the increasing emphasis on numbers and codes in her Obirin Show parody, "I've Got Your Number, Baby."

One of Obirin Show's one-act plays, "The Still Alarm," involves Tyler Strand, who, oblivious to his burning hotel, placidly looks over the plans of his future house.

Spring production of Moliere comedy characterized by period costumes

Authentic period set design and costumes seasoned LT's production of Moliere's "Tartuffe," this year's Spring Play. The French comedy featured the story of a scoundrelous opportunist masquerading as a holy man in the home of a wealthy lord in hopes of getting control of the man's fortune and family.

Directly after tryouts, the newly-chosen cast began rehearsals which included improvisations to help cast members become more aware of possible characterizations. The translation by Richard Wilber featured dialogue in rhymed couplets which demanded natural delivery to avoid a stilted sing-song effect; actors spent several practices speaking parts in their own words to understand the meaning of each line, and then returned to the text, striving for smooth phrasing. Director Miss Sandra Mellen, assisted by Mariel Bimm, updated the time of the play by approximately fifty years and decided to use late 17th century Dutch styles, which would set the mood while avoiding the affected French of the period. Necessary props included appropriate furniture and a large loaf of French bread, while make-up workers had the opportunity of working with powdered wigs. Although the play told of a time past and situations remote, the playwright's wit and rowdy characters still entertain modern audiences.

Poor Pinocchio becomes the brunt of the pickpockets' ridicule when they find out he feeds burros for a living.

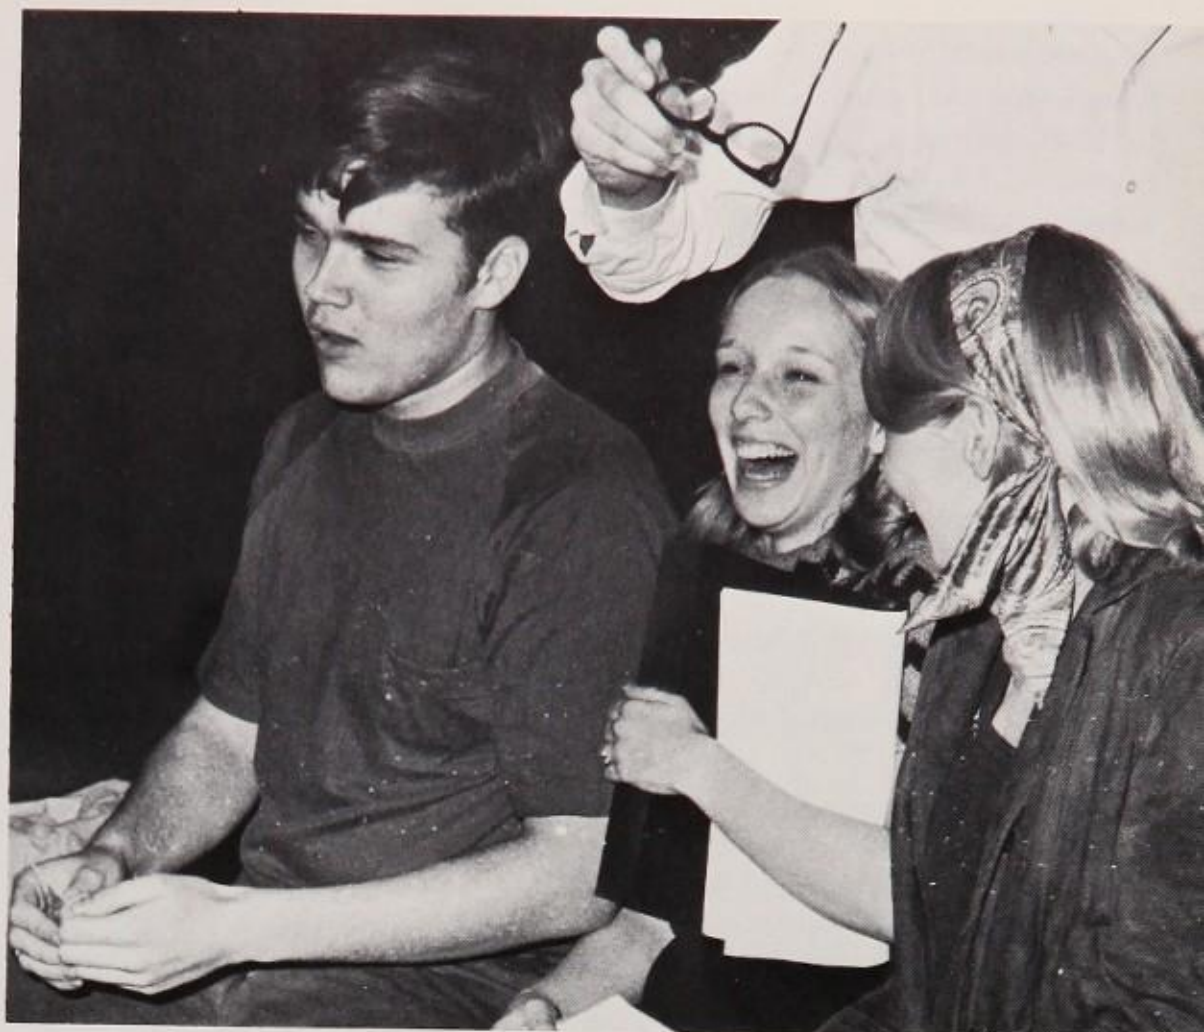

Practice flights for Cricket and Blue Fairy with Cricket's invisible umbrella insure smooth-running, eventful performances of the '69 Corral Show.

Animal sounds from the kicking, heehawing senior boys' chorus line fill the Corral during the last hurried weeks before the show.

Corral Show directors Dopsy Singleton and Gwen Dawson break up over a script interpretation by one of the show's three writers, Vince Slivka.

Because last year's combination of original script and music proved to be so successful, the score was again composed by students for "Wooden You?", the 1969 Corral Show. The spoof on the Pinocchio story featured a two-puppet search toward love despite evil accomplices and trying times.

An enlarged staff of student directors and advisor Mr. David Thompson aimed for a more efficient production schedule than was had in previous years. Committee-heads were chosen before completion of the text to allow time for detailed planning. Publicity chairmen advertised the show through use of buttons for the first time. The large task of distributing ticket orders and contacting patrons was finished before door-to-door selling started. Each cast member was responsible for his own costume, which he made after receiving a basic design; the committee strove toward a striking effect with vividly colored puppets' clothes, tatters for the villains' garments, outlandish outfits for the exaggerated character roles. A special difficulty was designing a practical for dancers in the donkey chorus line, which required two boys to form each animal. Further complicating the normally detailed construction of sets and drops for the production was depicting a whale and then creating the illusion of a whale's stomach directly following a scene outside the fish.

Augmenting the talents of those on stage were students who served Theatre Board by completing the many backstage tasks necessary to any dramatic production. For each play, committee planning began simultaneously with rehearsals. Publicity workers started early by silk-screening posters from student designs and circulating them through the business districts and schools in the area. Those working on props and costumes were assigned accessories to collect. As the presentation drew near, committee members were called on to sell tickets before and after school and on nights of performance. During dress rehearsals make-up workers experimented with a variety of applications to find the best possible effect under the lights. Finally, volunteers acted as ushers during the completed production.

Striving to make this year's group more actively involved in the school, president Elayne Pilant encouraged members to organize and sponsor Red-White-and-Blue day, which involved making and selling ribbons to raise funds for the blind. Donations went toward the purchase of Braille books for veterans in Hines Hospital.

To recognize the efforts of active participants in LT productions, National Thespian Society continued as one of the school's most selective honorary organizations. Points were awarded after each play by second-year members and sponsor Mr. David Thompson. Performance in both backstage and acting phases of production was rewarded, and experience in a variety of capacities was encouraged.

SC Drama Club includes experience in backstage work

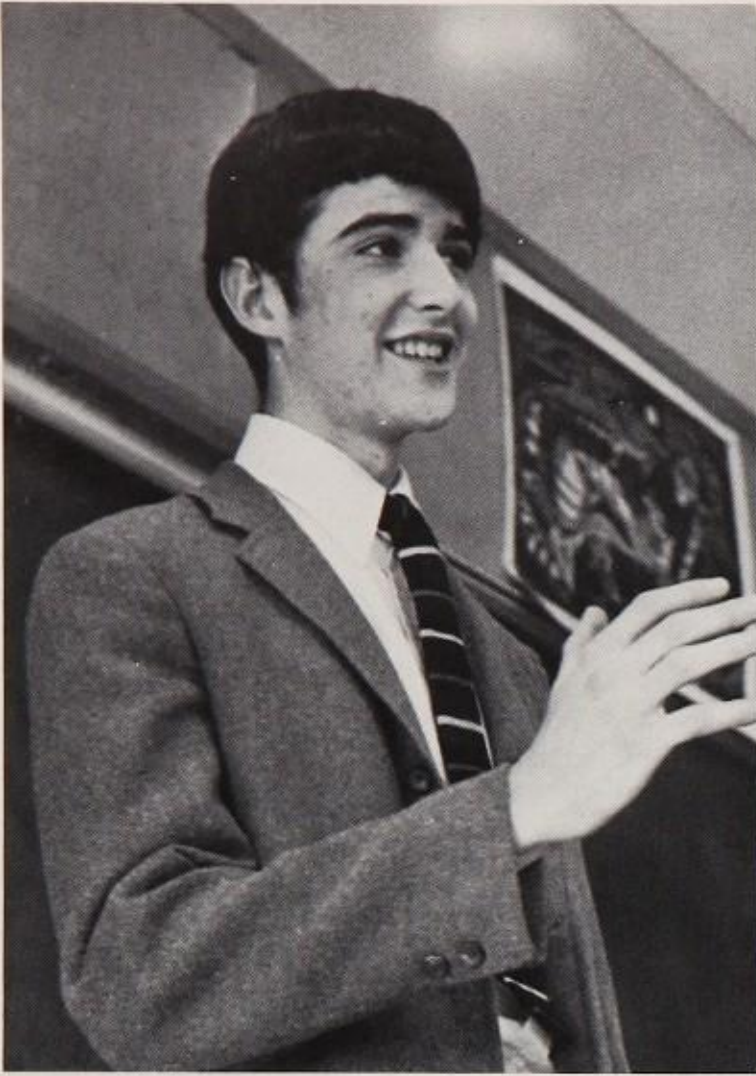

In an attempt to expose students to theater techniques, president Sallie Deeley and sponsor Mr. Richard Albright organized the activities of the South Campus Drama Club. There were workshops designed to teach the many forms of stage make-up for use in actual productions. From the experience gained at the sessions, a crew was capable of helping to apply the make-up for the cast of the South Campus play, "You Can't Take It With You." By helping with the make-up, the crew also gained experience with backstage work.

Throughout the year members were engaged in performing cuttings from various plays, sometimes with rehearsal, sometimes extemporaneously. The club also previewed the script of the play later performed at South Campus. Late in the year plans were made to view a professional production in Chicago.

Inter-school awards captured by Speech Teams

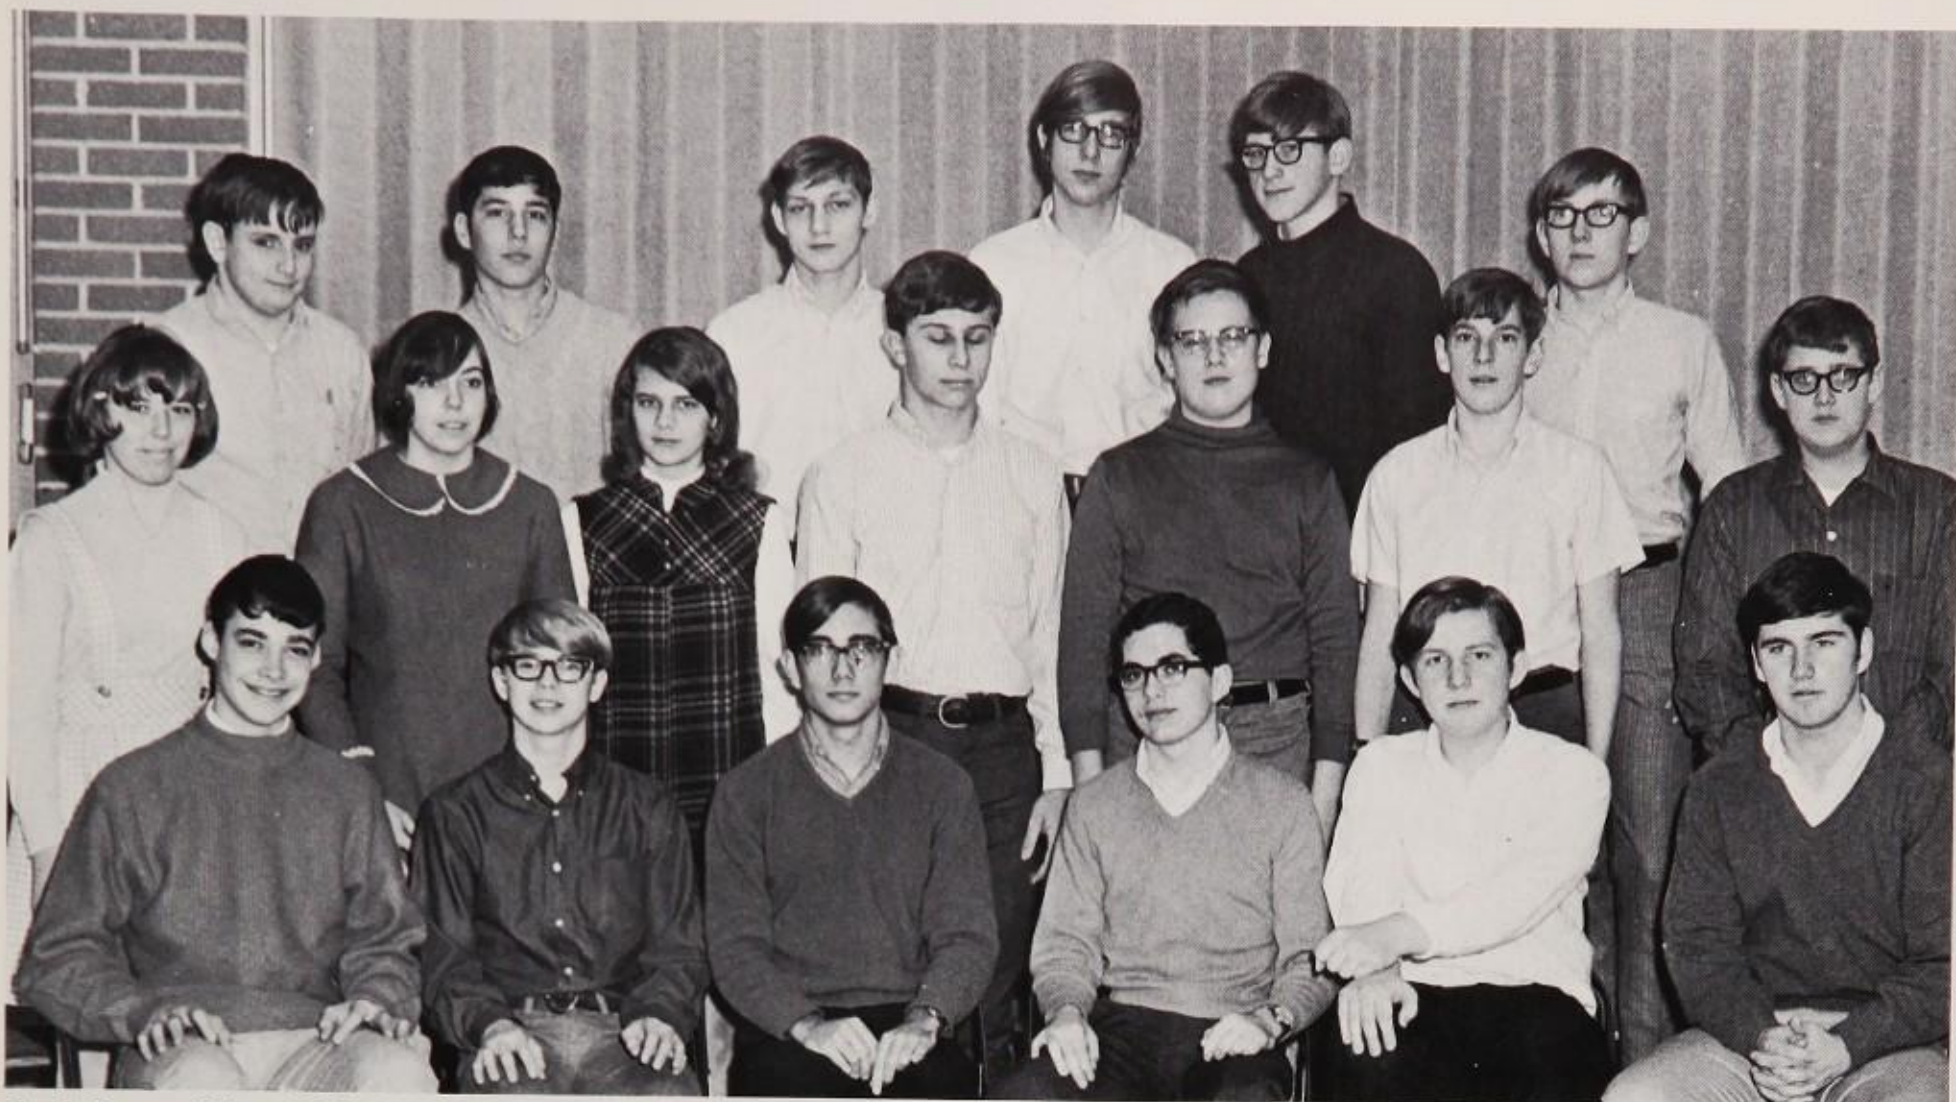

Seasoning his original discussion of urban problems with appropriate gestures, speech contestant Charlie Schroeder polishes his presentation to gain Mr. Stacey's approval.

This year the Speech Team, headed by Mr. Frank Stacy, strived for strength and depth in its tournaments. The team's wish was to send from two to four good competitors for each division to each local tournament from a total of thirty or more members. The local tournaments were culminated with a conference tournament at York December 14, a district tournament February 15, and sectional and state tournaments beginning the first of April. Speech members also competed in the twenty-second Voice of Democracy contest for scholarships and the American Legion contest. Basic entries at each tournament consisted of extemporaneous speaking, original oration, serious reading, comedy reading, after-dinner speaking, verse reading, original monologue, prose reading, radio speaking, and oratorical declamation. On the whole, the LT Speech team competed against an increased number of teams from other schools. The recent additions of facilities in the speech area enabled more students to simultaneously practice and work on their speeches than had previously been possible.

The Debate team, headed by Mr. Donald Childs, Mrs. Janis Leich, and new sponsor Mrs. Adelaide Bittner, got under way this year by recruiting new freshmen troops and reforming the strength of the varsity team. In a mock tournament held in October seven freshmen teams got an idea of the competition they would meet at later tournaments. New debators soon learned they would be rigidly disciplined by a strict attendance system, carefully planned intra-school debates, and the monthly inspection of topic cards. Every debator on each level was required to submit fifty evidence cards on the topic, "Resolved: That the United States should establish a system of compulsory service by all citizens." The best of these cards were then compiled into a composite file by the varsity team. The freshmen team, which was larger than in previous years, the sophomore team, and the varsity team were sent to all-day Saturday debates to compete with other schools. The defending conference champion varsity team met stiff competition in tournaments at NIU, ISU, Augustana, and U. of I. where the team took third place out of one hundred and twenty-four entries.

Honor Society acknowledges student participation

February saw the election of 106 seniors to National Honor Society, bringing the total membership to 168, for the class of 1969. A committee of faculty members chose these students on the basis of academic achievement, personality, evidence of leadership potential and service to the school. Those elected were entitled to sign the official register and receive pins ordered from the society's headquarters.

Newly elected National Honor Society members Pam Meyers and Jill Schroeder order the pins which signify their high levels of academic and extra-curricular achievement.

Quill & Scroll: acknowledgement for LT's top journalists

Quill and Scroll, the national honor society for high school journalists, is an organization made up of members of high school publications. Outstanding service and work on either the Tabulae or Lion qualified staffers for election to the society. In the early spring an initiation dinner was held for the new members who first participated in a traditional ceremony, including the lighting of candles, the repeating of a journalistic oath, and the signing of a membership roster.

Quill and Scroll's upcoming initiation ceremony for new members plunges co-presidents Doug Rein and John Shustitzky into a late afternoon planning session.

Having solicited manuscripts from students writers, "Pen and Inklings" staff, with sponsors Miss Yvonne Vish at South Campus and Miss Josephine Allen and Miss Norma Jordan at North, culled the best writing for the publication of LT's literary annual. After the editors and staffs were chosen at both campuses, they decided on several changes for this year's publication. Closer co-operation between North and South Campuses resulted in the elimination of the divider page that had relegated South Campus material to the back of the magazine. In conjunction with the newly integrated selections, art work and creative photography were reintroduced. The illustrative material was chosen by a staff committee from the many entries turned in by LT students.

The major part of the publication released in the late spring was, of course, student writing. Striving to select work that was representative of the best done by all students, the staff attempted to publish a balance of poetry, short stories and plays, essays, and critiques that would provide the students of LT with an interesting variety of selections to read and to think about.

New offices speed production of "Lion"

No blackboards, air conditioned offices, and satellite rooms, plus work rooms and a typing galley greeted the "Lion" staff as they moved into their new quarters this summer. After remaking curtains and temporarily employing pre-schoolers' blackboards, the IIIJ and Journalism II classes settled down to work on publishing a consistently high-rated paper containing academic, extra-curricular, sports, and special interest articles while supplying local newspapers with hundreds of releases through the Press Bureau.

Guided by editors Shel Graham and Woody Brosnan, and sponsor Miss Kay Keefe, the "Lion" continued its self-improvement with wider advertisement coverage to provide for increasing publication costs, as well as featuring current interest subjects.

South Campus "Lion" members worked after school to familiarize themselves with journalism techniques. In addition to spending hours of hard work at their typewriters, North Campus staffers challenged other organizations to basketball games to show that they excel in fields other than writing.

Walking along the second floor of North Campus, a person might have been surprised to hear typewriters tapping to a variety of pop albums and see a multitude of frantic students racing around a room full of flying memos and pictures. From the sign on the door, he would soon learn that the room was the new home of the "Tabulae," LT's yearbook. Under the direction of Mr. James Bull, the staff soon realized the importance of speed, accuracy, and co-operation in producing a record of the year which would present a vital picture of the many facets of life at LT.

Planning for the book began during the summer at a picnic dinner. In the fall, many staff members attended the annual ISHSPA convention for high school journalists at the University of Illinois, while others went to the NSPA convention in Chicago over Thanksgiving. Throughout the year, incessant deadlines demanded original copy, creative layouts, and effective photographs. The strain of the hectic pace was somewhat eased by birthday cakes for editors, occasional parties, and dinners on late-nights at the office. Even after all material had been submitted, proofs had to be checked and next year's editorial board chosen. With the June distribution came the final realization of the success of the year's efforts.

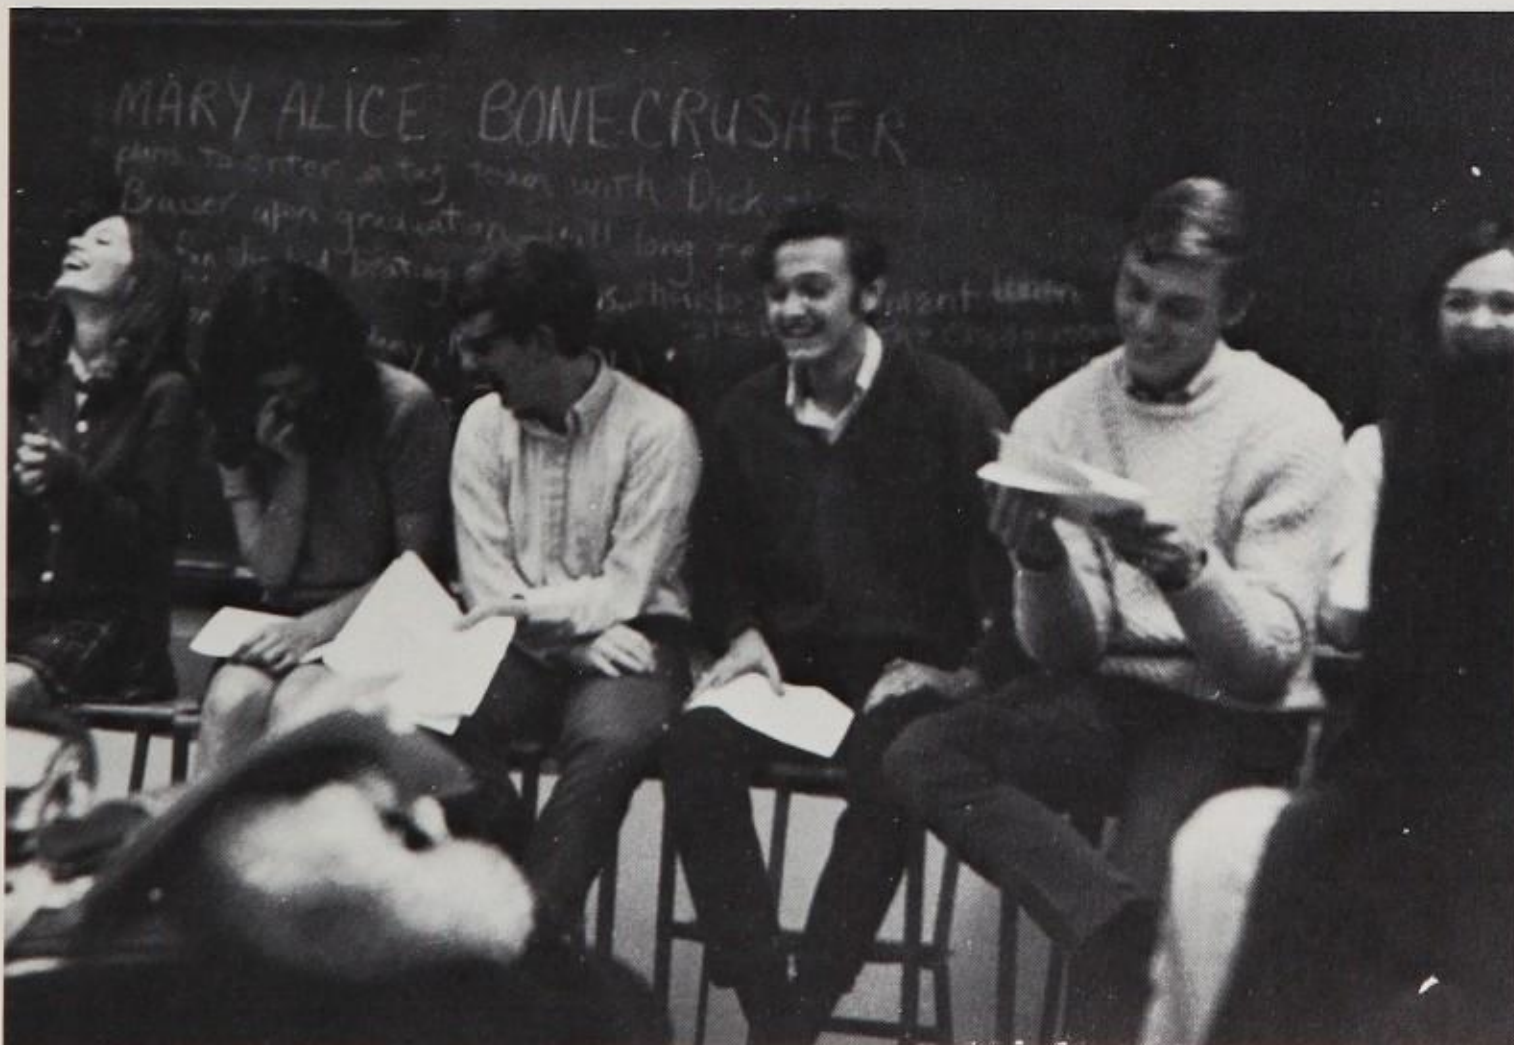

Amid carbon paper and schoolbooks, "Tab" staffers collaborate on captions and headlines for the all-too-fast-approaching deadline.

Corral's twenty-fifth birthday revives memories, inspires change

Faced with the necessity of running a large organization on a limited budget, the Corral raised the price of memberships and incorporated a variety of new activities while retaining favorite traditional programs. Weekends featured local combos; and special events—such as Winter Olympics and Grand Prix, which stressed inter-class competition, and Big Nites, which presented well-known groups—were scheduled throughout the year.

In an effort to increase interest in the Corral, board members strove to initiate changes by holding a fall workshop to discuss problems of membership, participation, and rule enforcement. To provide a room for students to talk, a front room was converted into a panelled lounge. Carving Halloween pumpkins and giving the needy canned food collected as admission to the Christmas party demonstrated the organization's interest in community affairs.

Many memorable events marked the Corral's silver anniversary. Homecoming saw a prize-winning float and a Sunday morning coffee for Class of '44 alums, who started the Corral. Board members hosted an adult dance, which was repeated this year for area parents. In the spring nearly 200 members worked on the annual Corral Show, which provided the revenue for planning by next year's newly-elected board.

Encouraging more girls to participate actively in all club-sponsored events was the aim of Girls' Club, under the direction of Mrs. Linda Cordogian and Holly Dickinson at North Campus and Mrs. Helen Buhl and Cathy Cummings at South Campus. This goal was achieved by adding several new activities to the year's program. These included the box supper at South Campus and the girl-ask-boy hayride at North Campus. A number of holiday parties were held at the East Side Day nursery with the aid of South Campus Girls' Club.

Working with the board, Girls' Club Council planned many service projects and drives. Both campuses held a fashion show, titled Daisy Day, and a dating panel. One of the highlights of the year was "Strawberry Fields," the Girls' Club King of Hearts Dance held in February. The annual Homecoming float with Boys' Club, Bow Day, and the Club Carnival were traditional activities that continued this year.

Providing services for both the community and the school was the goal of this year's Boys' Club. Under the guidance of Bill Bauer, president, and faculty sponsor, Mr. Robert Neuneker, the board is designed to co-ordinate school activities. The Boys' Club Directory was one of the projects from which the entire school benefited. Homecoming found the club co-sponsoring a float with Girls' Club. In February, fifty boys attended a Chicago Bulls professional basketball game. The Boys' Club held their annual dance in March.

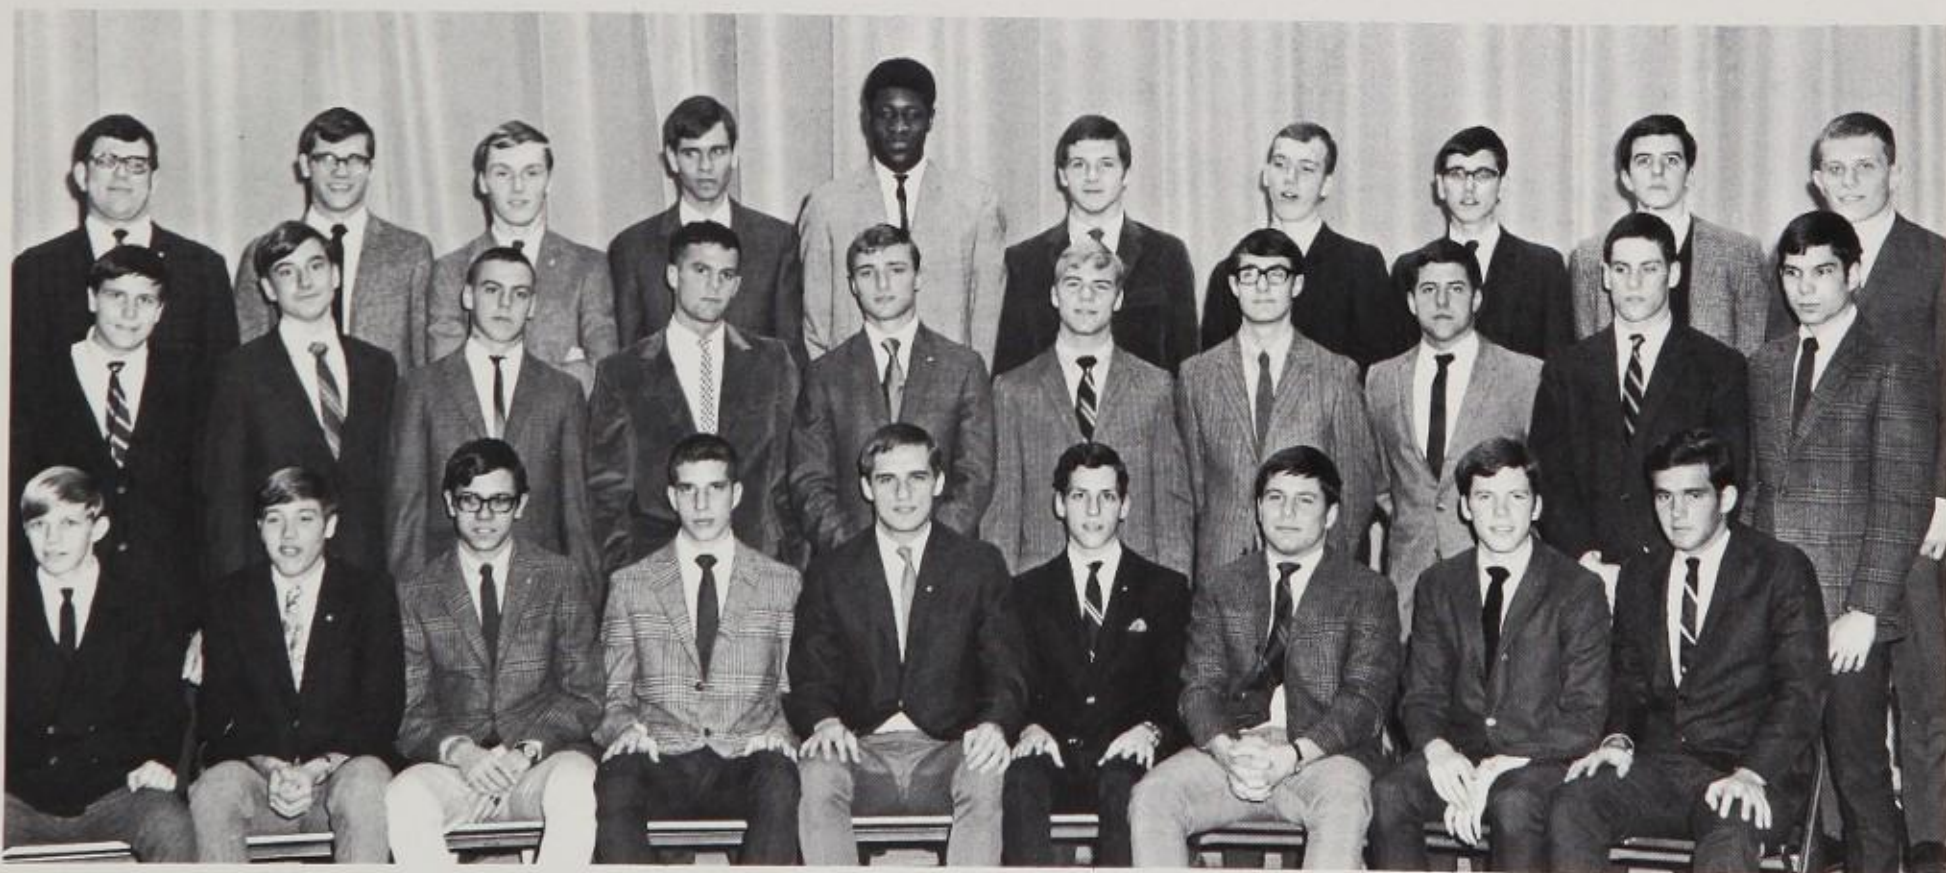

One of the main projects of the year was a clothing drive for underprivileged people in the Appalachian Mountains. This year, as in the past, the club gave financial help and friendship to an orphan in Thailand.

Key Club adds Derby Day to traditional projects

Tuesdays mean 7:30 A.M. club meetings for Key Club members, who must plan service projects and related activities.

Tuesday mornings brought Key Club members together this year to discuss service projects and programs or to listen to speakers from the local Kiwanis Club, their parent organization. Sophomore applicants to the club were screened by sponsors Mr. Bert Kraus and Mr. Scott Wilsech, in order that the quota for each class might be filled. Throughout the year the club participated in Kiwanis activities such as Pancake Day and Peanut Day, and also sent representatives to the weekly Kiwanis luncheon. Supervised by president Bill Bauer, Key Club helped in the annual soap drive for Dixon State Mental Hospital, did hospital volunteer work, and assisted as junior directors at the Corral. In addition to these traditional activities, Key Club innovated the hugely successful Derby Day, and also co-sponsored a school leaders' banquet.

Interact members serve fellow students, community

In its third year at LT, Interact, sponsored by Rotary International, planned and carried out a variety of services for the school and community. The membership of the club was regulated by a board of directors, headed by president Mark Pender and sponsor Mr. Robert Fletcher, who received applications monthly. At bi-weekly meetings, members heard career talks by prominent members of Rotary Club. Projects included helping the Channel 11 TV drive, collecting articles for the Chicago State Hospital, delivering food and baskets for the La Grange Community Nursing Service, and sending copies of "LT Reports" to local businessmen. To raise money and to provide a safety feature to the residents of the community, they sold fire extinguishers.

They also participated in international projects with Japan, Australia, and Argentina. As a service to the school, members served as ushers and hall guards for LT's musical and dramatic events. Their final project was sponsoring a faculty basketball game.

Human Relations Council presents speakers in search of understanding

This year, the primary objective of the Human Relations Council was to deal more effectively with the racial and social problems within the school. Members first became involved by attending a series of six lectures on Afro-American history at the Hinsdale Community House. Mrs. Betty Morse and Miss Lucille Jacobs, co-sponsors of the club, and president Gary Jackson helped to develop this series for the Concerned Response to Crisis Committee as a result of the increasing tension between races due to the assassination of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The series included discussions of African culture and the contribution of the Negro to American history. Included with the usual films and guest speakers was Mrs. Halabertin, an authority on Afro-American history. Most Human Relation Council meetings were concerned with discussions. Some demands of both the club and black students were partially realized when the history courses incorporated some Afro-American history into its regular curriculum. Again this year, outside help in tutoring and social aid was taken up by the club.

The past is reflected in the present during one of the Afro-American history seminars as Mr. Timuel Black relates some of his experiences in Chicago's black ghetto.

Mu Tau unites musically inclined students

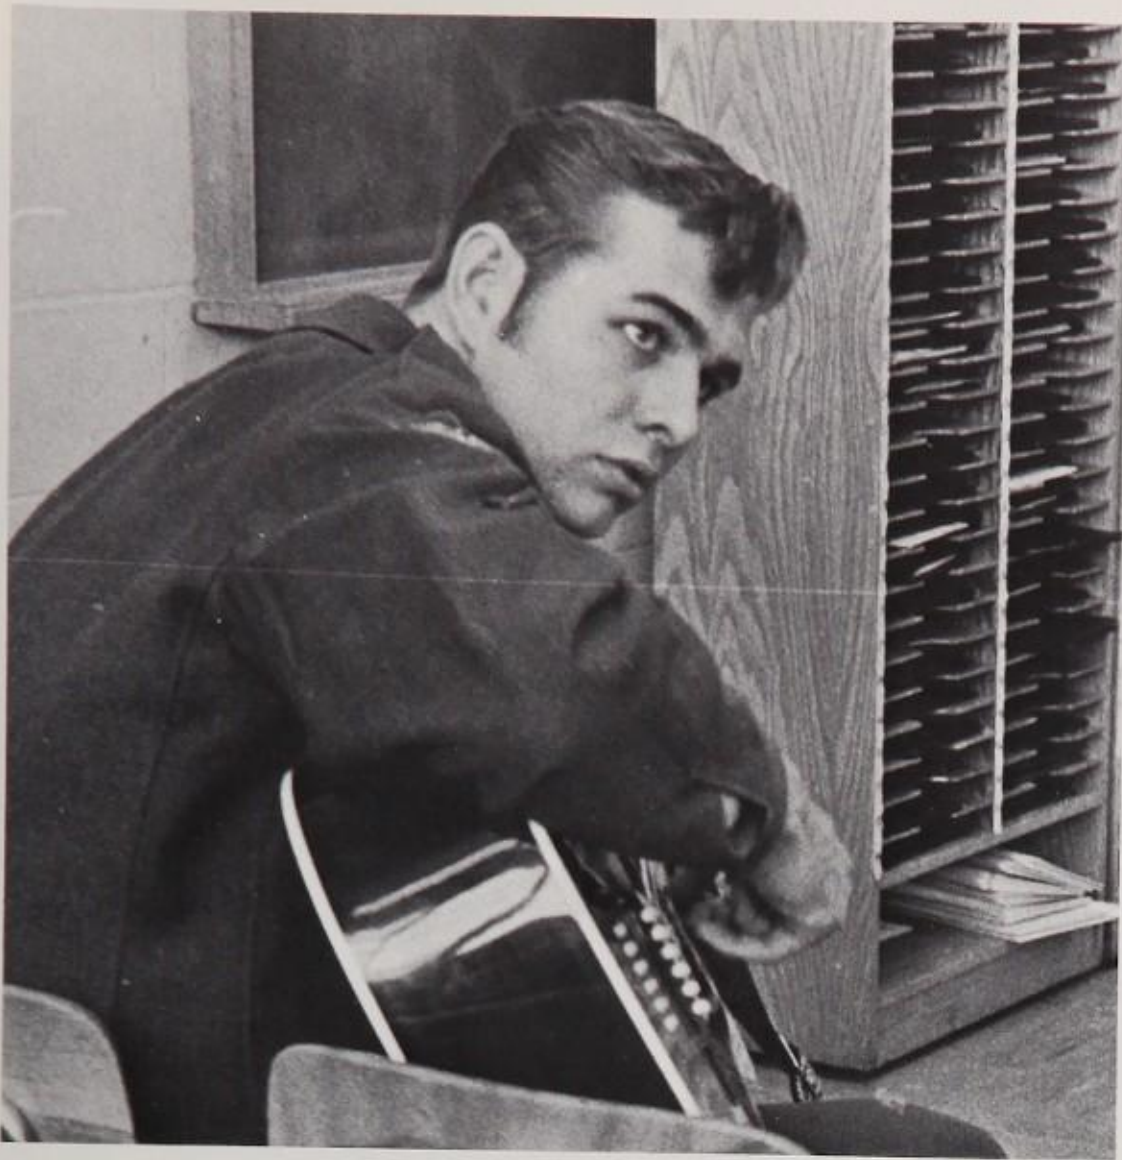

This year North and South Campus Mu Tau members combined to make one club for people who are interested in music. Twenty members under sponsors Mr. Fred Lawler and Mr. Paul Barber met bi-weekly to carry out the club's program. A field trip to see a performance of the Vienna Boys' Choir attracted all members plus forty-five other students. Special activities such as a party at Christmas were representative of the club's effort to promote greater participation.

Plans for a trip to hear the Vienna Boys' Choir are aired, as Marilyn Sanders leads Mu Tau members in a bi-weekly discussion.

LT students interested in folk and jazz music widened their appreciation and understanding in Folk Music Club. Under the leadership of Christy James, president, and Mrs. Mary Riedel, the sponsor, members formed groups and evaluated each one's ability to perform.

This year, the twenty-nine members of the Folk Music Club participated in forms of folk and jazz masses for various churches in the La Grange area. They also performed at programs in the Little Theater at South Campus during the school year.

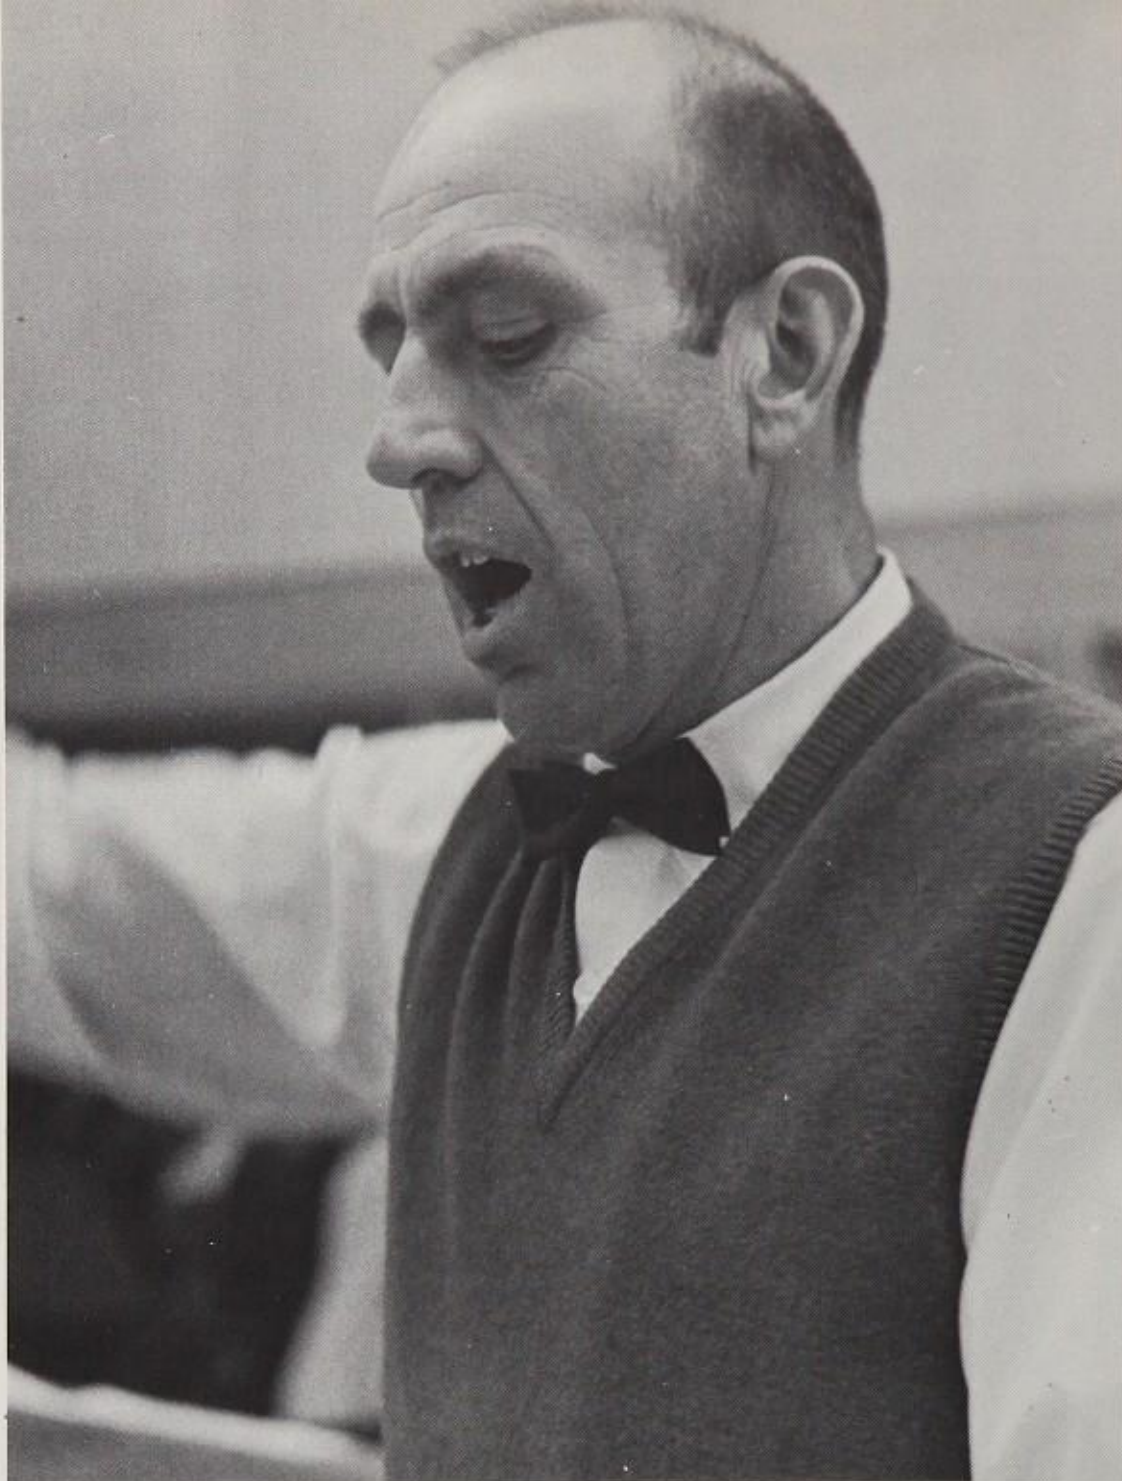

The final meeting of each year was an outing to Illinois Beach State Park.

Pop, classical performances show Choruses' versatility

Opportunities multiplied for students to participate in the LT Choruses this year. With the addition of new courses and the expansion of traditional ones, a record number of students became members of various vocal groups.

At the freshman level, the glee clubs appeared for open houses, while ensembles gave special programs. Three sophomore choruses rounded out the program at South with similar performances. Sophomore Mixed Chorus joined the orchestra in presenting the annual Spring Concert, while sophomore madrigal singers performed for community organizations.

Upperclass groups soloed at the Christmas Vespers and the North Campus Choral Concert in May, as well as in school assemblies. Combining their talents with South Campus vocalists, all LT Chorus members performed at the mass festivals held at Christmas and during the spring.

Immersed in the music, Mr. Lawler involves the choir as well as directs it as he simultaneously sings and listens.

Listening to the singers around them as well as to their own parts, Choir members concentrate on perfecting a number for an upcoming concert.

Maintaining their traditional busy schedule of performances, the Choir once again aimed to present a wide range of productions of the highest possible calibre. The Christmas season brought two concerts and an assembly for North Campus students. Between the concerts, Choir members had tryouts for parts in the annual musical comedy, which started rehearsals immediately after vacation. In February the group traveled to Illinois State University to participate in a choral clinic. Upon the completion of the operetta, Choir had less than a month to perfect numbers for Oratorio. Spring vacation provided a break for the singers before appearances at the spring concerts. The year was brought to a close with their final performance at senior Baccalaureate.

Chosen annually from Choir members on the basis of the most pleasing vocal blend, Small Choir has tripled in size and become one of the most active extra-curricular choral groups at LT since its initiation twelve years ago. Throughout its existence, the ensemble has tried to present a variety of music through its performances for the school and community organizations. Making its traditional debut at the Pops Concert, the group went on to a series of local appearances at Christmas programs. Following the operetta, the group was much in demand for several school functions. The season came to a close with the final Small Choir performance at the spring concert given by North Campus vocal groups.

The three Bands, conducted by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf and Mr. Paul Barber, filled important places this year in the music program of LT. Beginning at South Campus with the freshman and sophomore bands then finishing with the varsity band, members strengthened their knowledge of musical theory and instrumental techniques. The groups alternated with each other playing at football and basketball games as well as appearing in parades, Homecoming, Memorial Day, and Pet Parade, throughout the year. They also presented fall and spring concerts, a spring music festival, and a program for Home School Council. Working during class periods and with individual practice, the band members presented a variety of selections to students and the public. The year's activities were concluded with a picnic in June.

Specialized sections augment orchestra concerts

With an unusually large number of both interested and extremely capable musicians, this year's Orchestra was able to form two small experimental groups. One of these was the South Campus Concert Orchestra. Consisting exclusively of stringed instruments, the small group of freshmen and sophomores was directed by Mr. Paul Barber and performed in most concerts with the North Campus Orchestra. The separation was felt necessary this year because the North Campus group had become too large to function efficiently. Greater specialization and opportunities for more to play also were made possible by the change.

The other experimental group was Chamber Orchestra. This was an extra-curricular activity for some of LT's best musicians. Although the group met after school, it also performed in some school concerts. This group is unique because its members were chosen and directed by a fellow student, Ken Andrews.

Though it was not as large as it has been in previous years, Latin II Club continued to be active this year under the direction of Mr. Wayne Hammerlund. Election of officers was held in Latin II classrooms during October and resulted in the election of Tom Burke as president. At the first meeting held early in November, a Latin IV student showed her slides of Rome taken during a recent visit to Europe. Other meetings offered such events as word games and skits about life in Rome. Many American songs using Latin lyrics were taught and sung at these meetings. In the spring, freshmen Latin I students were also invited to attend a meeting. Latin II Club members looked anxiously into the future to the Roman banquet—the traditional climax of the year for all Latin students.

Roman customs, language revived by Cicero- Vergil members

Latin lived this year as Cicero-Vergil Club offered North Campus Latin students a chance to enjoy the language and customs of ancient Rome. Co-consuls Debbie Karabin and Chuck Sparks led members through two fall meetings designed to organize and unify the club before planning the annual Saturnalia party at Christmas time. Held at a member's house, the party enabled students to celebrate the holiday with games, refreshments, and socializing. The foreign students, Katriina and Fernando, were guests of the club on another occasion before the final activity of the year, the Roman banquet. Wearing traditional Roman dress, members were served dinner by South Campus slaves and entertained by skits, gladiator fights, and songs. Students also participated in Club Carnival in order to raise money to help support an Italian orphan.

Travellers relate overseas experiences to NC French Club

Under the guidance of French Club Council, a board composed of representatives from each French class with president, Jeanne Stange, and Miss Patricia Lindgren, the many activities of the club were mapped out. At South Campus, the newly organized board set up the first party to include a sampling of bread, cheese, and "wine" of French origin.

North Campus members enjoyed the viewing of rented films in the afternoon and lectures on the experiences of students who had participated in the American Institute for Foreign Study in France during the summer. Participants at both campuses took a field trip to Chicago to see the film "The Two of Us", with French dialogue and English subtitles. In addition to the annual Christmas party, club members sang French carols in the Colonial Manor. As the year ended president Patti Lawrence and sponsor, Miss Ellouise Ford, announced plans for the remaining weeks which included dinner at a French restaurant and more films.

Three clubs show Iberian customs to Spanish students

There is a Spanish Club for any level Spanish student at LT. Los Castellanos, the South Campus Spanish club, sponsored by Mrs. Lillian Winkleman, began the year with several guest speakers. The remainder of the year included a piñata party and a booth at the club carnival.

El Circulo Espanol, the club for second year featured guest speakers, Spanish parties, and a trip to the Museum of Science and Industry to see "Christmas around the world" exhibit. Dinner in an authentic Spanish restaurant was enjoyed by all. The club was sponsored by Miss Charlotte Schwartz. The third and fourth year students enjoyed the activities of Los Sabios, the advanced Spanish club sponsored by Mr. Richard Kottler. The basic work project for this year was to collect Christmas toys to be given the Puerto Rican children in the inner city. There were also trips to see plays presented in Spanish.

Spanish Club members Brian Rose and Doreen Brown add an outer covering of crepe paper to countless layers of papier-mache to form another piñata for their Club Carnival booth.

One of the most important roles of the German Club at each campus was to furnish the student with some conversational experience. At their opening meeting in October, the members heard from the students who had spent their summers in Germany with travel groups, in study programs, or vacationing with their families. The class representatives and officers, under the direction of president Joe Yount and sponsor Mr. Albert Hoch, carefully planned the Christmas party, which consisted of the presentation of a skit and the serving of refreshments. Concluding the year's activities was the club's annual trip to Hessberger's Heidelberger Restaurant, where the club members were treated to such German delicacies as rouladen, wienerschnitzel, and Bavarian creme. After the meal, the group attended an undubbed German movie to test their translating skills.

Russian Club is a cultural club. The main interest of the club, which is directed by president John Korber and Mr. Frank Petronaitis, is to express the cultural aspects of the Soviet Union and the Russian language. Members need not be taking a Russian course to join, yet knowledge of Russian is an asset in actively participating in the events held by the club. Some of the year's activities were movies, two inter-school mixers, and guest speakers.

The climax of the year of activities was the annual Russian banquet. Parents of the club members were invited and members provided the entertainment. The evening came to a close as awards were presented to outstanding members of the club.

Sr. Discussion Leaders assist frosh with future plans

In an attempt to bring the two campuses closer together, the Senior Discussion Leaders made a series of trips to South Campus to talk with the Freshmen in guidance discussions. During these sessions, the Leaders made suggestions on topics they felt would be helpful to the Freshmen for the remainder of their high school years. Typical discussions concerned school activities such as Homecoming, Corral, four-year plans, and school involvement.

To become a member of this group, seniors applied when they were juniors, and then were carefully selected by sponsor, Mr. Tom Hanson, and chairmen Kevin Dolan and Cheryl Herman.

Bi-Phy-Chem members benefit from lectures, field trips

The North Campus Bi-Phy-Chem started the year with interest and enthusiasm shown by the club members. At each week's meeting, a different topic was presented by a club member which covered all phases of science with special emphasis on topics of current interest. Field trips to Argonne National Laboratory and to Adler Planetarium were planned by president Randy Unsbee and sponsor Mr. Joseph Rorke.

The South Campus division of the club was not able to continue and disbanded after one semester. Thereafter, all interested freshmen and sophomores attended the North Campus meetings.

The crumpled-paper basketball championship waged on again this year as the Astro-Science Seminar entered another season. Amid the rebounds and foul shots, work went under-way to make a permanent stand for the club's telescope. Lectures and reports concerning the modern developments in new fields were presented to club members, and to increase their understanding of the stars, some of the amateur astronomers visited the Dearborn Observatory at Northwestern and the Adler Planetarium in Chicago. Under the guidance of their sponsor, Mr. William Clevenger, the club also conducted its own star-watches, always on the alert for unmapped stars and meteor showers.

Home Ec Club boutique eases, speeds Christmas shopping

This year's Home Ec. Club, under president Sue Stick and sponsors Mrs. Nancy Hoaglin and Miss Laura Sievers, began their year's activities with a modeling clinic. The club's Homecoming float, "Measure for Measure," was awarded first place in the blue division. Later, members prepared gifts and sang Christmas carols for patients at the Colonial Manor Nursing Home. The holiday season was further celebrated by a formal club tea for the members and their mothers. During the weeks before winter vacation, the club offered students the opportunity to purchase candy and handmade gifts at the Christmas Boutique. Profits were set aside as a scholarship for one of the members entering the field of home economics in college. Careers in the field were discussed at the February meeting. The year was brought to a close with the election of new officers, a fashion show, and a party for outgoing members.

Operating as a co-curricular club under the guidance of sponsor Mrs. Ruth Wernett and president Betty Jo Papp, LT branch, IOOA (Illinois Office Occupations Association) served to give students a chance to secure jobs at offices nearby while learning more about career opportunities in secretarial and related fields. Agendas for the meetings often included films on vocational programs and talks by guest lecturers; several times a year, area meetings of the statewide organization met for competition in skills such as typing and dictation. Early spring saw the club attending national conferences where organizations exchanged ideas and discussed vocations. Climaxing the year was a banquet dinner to which the girls invited their employers.

Catering to the interests of those LT students who plan to pursue careers in industry, VICA, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, provided a forum for discussing employment problems and personal experiences. The club, sponsored by Mr. Roger Jaaks and directed by president Dennis Burns, is part of a nation-wide organization with the purpose of aiding those who work during their high school years.

Health Careers Club is the new name for the now extinct FNA. The change in name was designed to get more involved and because the club was opened to others besides those interested in nursing. The many occupations under the heading health careers was the topic of slides and a talk by a speaker from the Health Careers Council in Chicago.

Additional speakers, slides and movies provided other informative meetings. Frequent trips were taken to Children's Memorial Hospital and Community Memorial General Hospital where students got a look at the occupations in which they were interested. A flower sale was held to raise money for a scholarship to be given to someone especially interested in pursuing a career in one of the health fields.

The initiation of a photo contest open to all LT students was the highlight of this year's Camera Club. Included among the club's other activities was a field trip to the Morton Arboretum where members were able to take advantage of opportunities for unusual photography. The Kodak film company supplied the club with interesting slides and films which provided the members with a broader knowledge of the different aspects of photography.

"Get Involved!" was the theme of this year's FTA. To encourage this, the club, under president Cheri Hoy and sponsor Miss Ruth Corley, initiated a point system. A certain number of points was awarded for Sunday school teaching, attendance at meetings, tutoring, and other activities displaying involvement. Members who gained a designated total of points by the end of the year, received an award.

Meetings were highlighted by speakers and films. Plans were made for several activities with other schools. These included attending the workshop at Maine East, the state convention, and a joint meeting with a nearby school. Other projects were a trip to an inner-city school and FTA's annual Christmas donation to the Helping Hand School. A party for seniors capped the year of involvement.

Forum stimulates student interest, awareness of current events

With a membership nearly doubled from last year's, Forum continued its activities this year under the leadership of president Jerry Rigan and sponsor Mr. Ken Luddington. Emphasizing guest speakers this year, the club presented to members and non-members alike such speakers as Carl Prussian, former FBI agent; Robert Creighton, candidate for state representative; Joe Woods, sheriff of Cook County; Bob Hale, TV personality; and Loser Blues, Yippie Leader. Also presented were Dr. Mary Calderone, a sex education expert co-sponsored by other community groups in addition to an experiment in life under a totalitarian regime conducted by POWR (People Opposed To White Racism). Memorable in addition to the excellent variety of speakers were the uniquely flamboyant newsletters sent to the membership.

Ski Club takes LTers on winter excursions

With the advent of the first snow flurries, Ski Club, headed by president Terry Hanson, came to life. Almost 175 skiers of all abilities hit the slopes with an enthusiasm that had developed even before winter. Movies on skiing techniques, plus a fall fashion show modeled by club members, provided the background necessary for the enjoyment of the sport. Ski Club patches were purchased from the treasury for the skiers. Aided by Mrs. Susan Skalinder, the club's sponsor, the officers planned outings to Alpine Valley, Wisconsin, which were highly successful. An end of the year used-equipment sale concluded the year's activities. When the slopes once again turned brown and green, Ski Club's members were left with the anticipation of the winter of 1970.

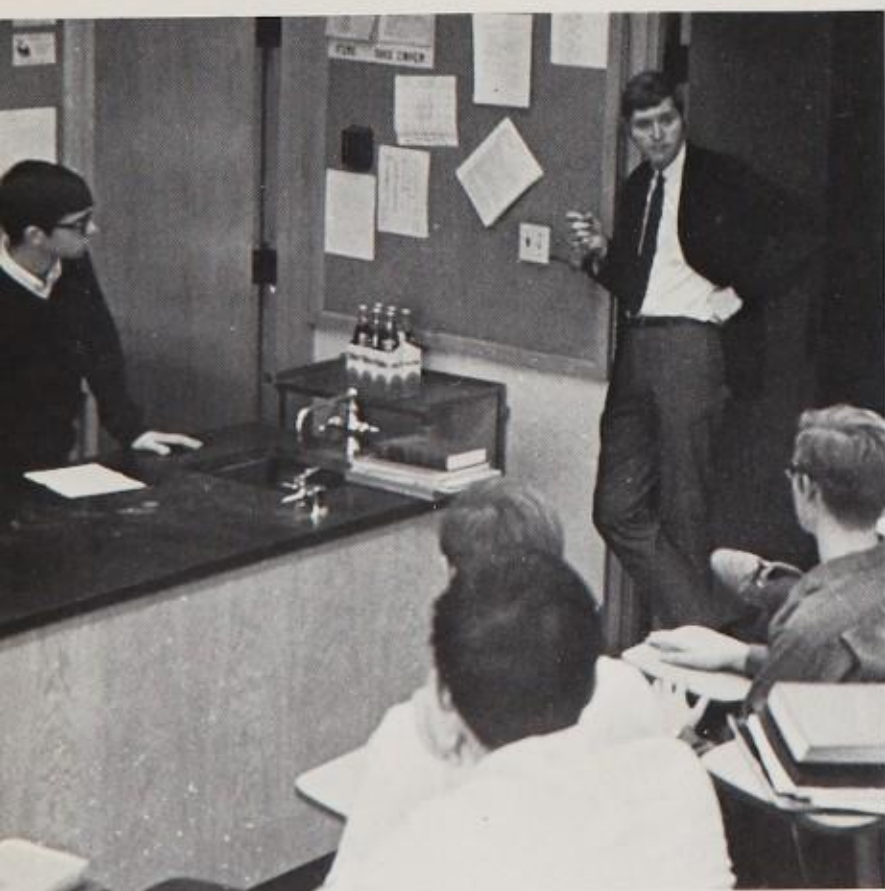

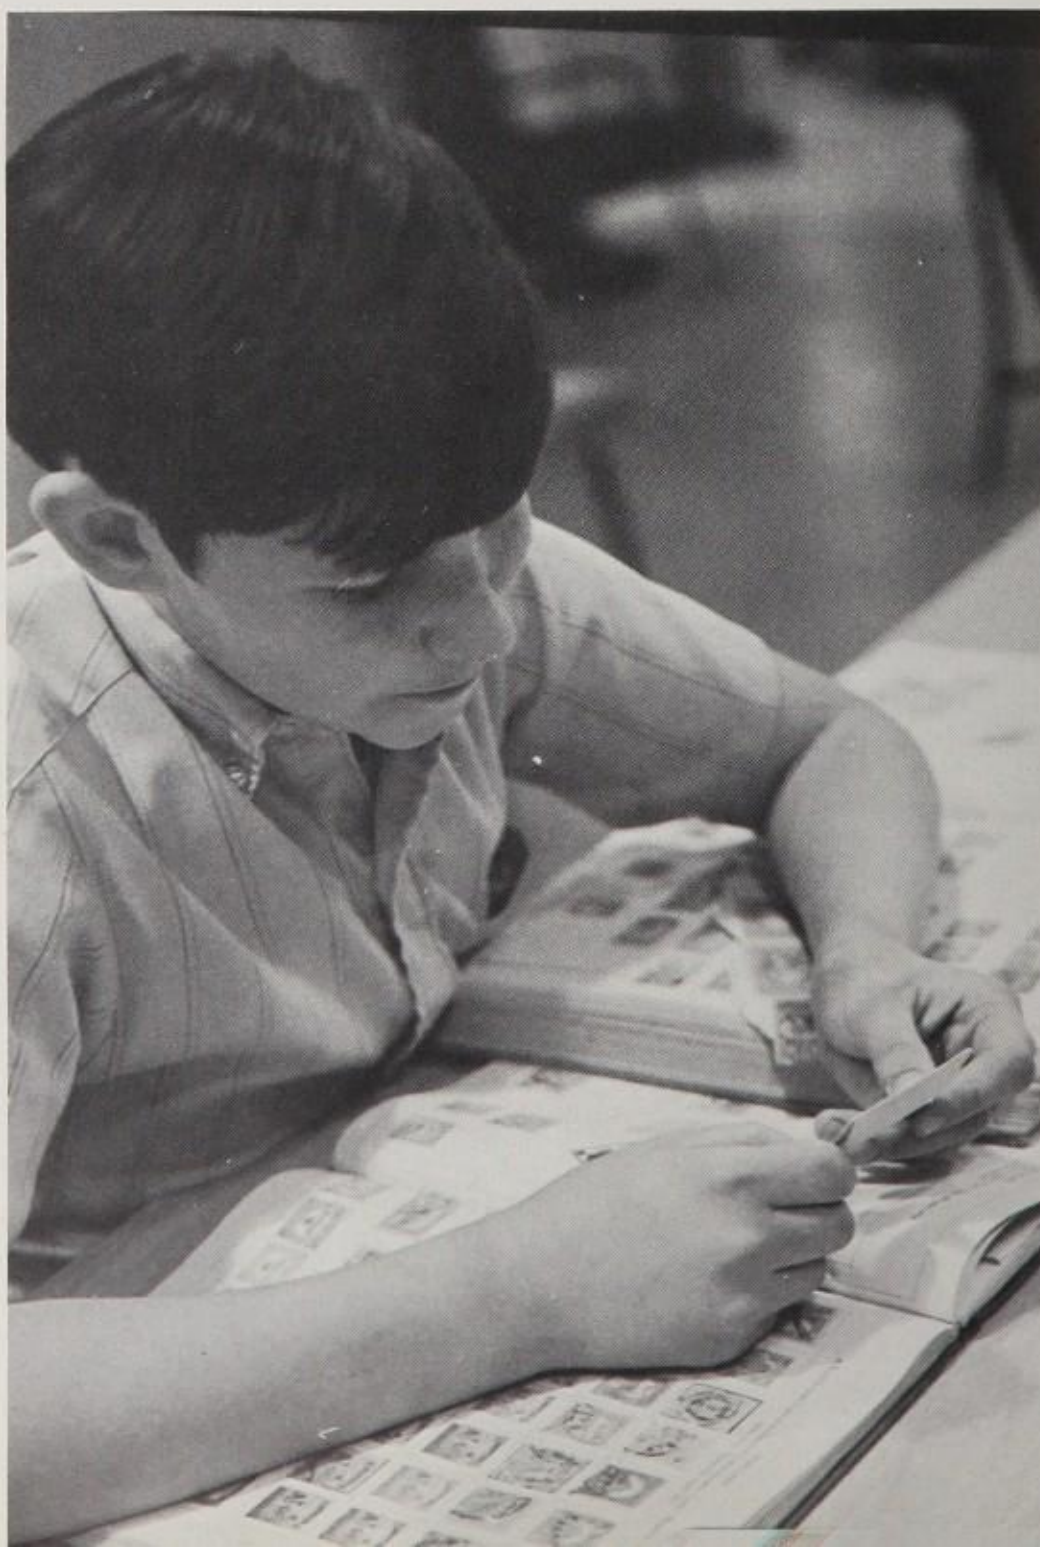

Stamp & Coin members expand collections, hear authorities

"Trading sessions", "specimen books", "overstrikes", and "first day issues" became commonly heard terms during the many meetings of LT's Stamp and Coin Club. President Stuart Piper and sponsor Mr. Edward Radatz invited authorities on special collector's items to speak to the members of the clubs at both North and South Campus. Other inter-club activities included participating in exchanges of their treasured pieces of metal and paper. Unfortunately, this year was marked by a somewhat slackened pace in trading outside the realm of the group. Although this condition yielded fewer surprise trades, it facilitated the consolidation of already established collections.

Chess, Bridge Clubs open to gaming enthusiasts

Bridge Club members resumed their meetings this year to once again compete in their absorbing game. Under the supervision of president Tim Long and sponsor Miss Mary Ann Bulger, selected teams played pre-dealt hands to assure that luck would not affect an otherwise skillfully played game. New members quickly learned bidding and playing techniques while members more familiar with the game improved their skills along with assisting others.

The highlights of the year included three tournaments in which members competed against each other to determine who the better players were and to give the beginners a sense of competition. By the end of the year, all members had gained the experience necessary to be skilled players.

Equestrians, marksmen teach safety, enjoys hobbies

Although construction equipment covered the shooting range in the basement of South Campus this year, the Rifle Club continued to function as it elected its officers and planned for the future. Since proper instruction in the care and use of firearms is of the utmost importance, the club members, guided by president Tom Voight and faculty sponsor, Mr. David Baker, attended a class on Friday afternoons for several weeks to gain this knowledge. Not before the members had successfully completed marksmanship tests were they considered skilled enough to participate in club activities.

The Rifle Club members, who are affiliated with the National Rifle Association, hope in the future not only to compete with each other individually, but also to compete with other schools on a postal basis. It was emphasized that target shooting is only a very enjoyable sport, to be pursued for the competitive aspects and the attempt for technical perfection.

The addition of new activities increased the membership of Saddle and Spur club this year. This newly-found interest has enabled Saddle and Spur to add Friday night rides to the regular Sunday excursions at Green Acres Stables. Club president Debbie Edgerle and new sponsor Miss Frances Fitch also gave each member the choice of riding English or western.

In addition to regular rides, the club members visited a breeding farm, attended the International Horse Show, and enjoyed a Christmas sleigh ride. A trail-ride picnic in the spring capped a busy year.

Code theory, instruction emphasized by Radio Club

The aim of this year's Radio Club was to orient more interested students in the field of communication. This was accomplished through Morse code and radio theory courses for non-license holding members. An outlet for these talents was provided by the club's ham radio station, W9MTJ, set up temporarily in sponsor Mr. Warning's physics room. A new idea introduced this year was a round-table discussion conducted over the radio, with any licensed member debating important issues. To see how an AM radio station operates, the club took their annual trip to WTAQ. Concluding the year was a field trip to a forest preserve where the members set up a portable radio station.

To keep as many students involved as possible and to inform members, guest speakers were asked to address the staff on topics pertinent to running a radio station. Programs broadcast from the top of the Vaughan Building were designed to educate and entertain listeners in addition to offering news, sports, and special event coverage.

Athletic events, plays, and musical productions were included and public opinion was surveyed to determine the listeners' interest.

During the second semester the station expanded its broadcasting time to six days a week.

Gallery visits, art shows accent NC Art Club year

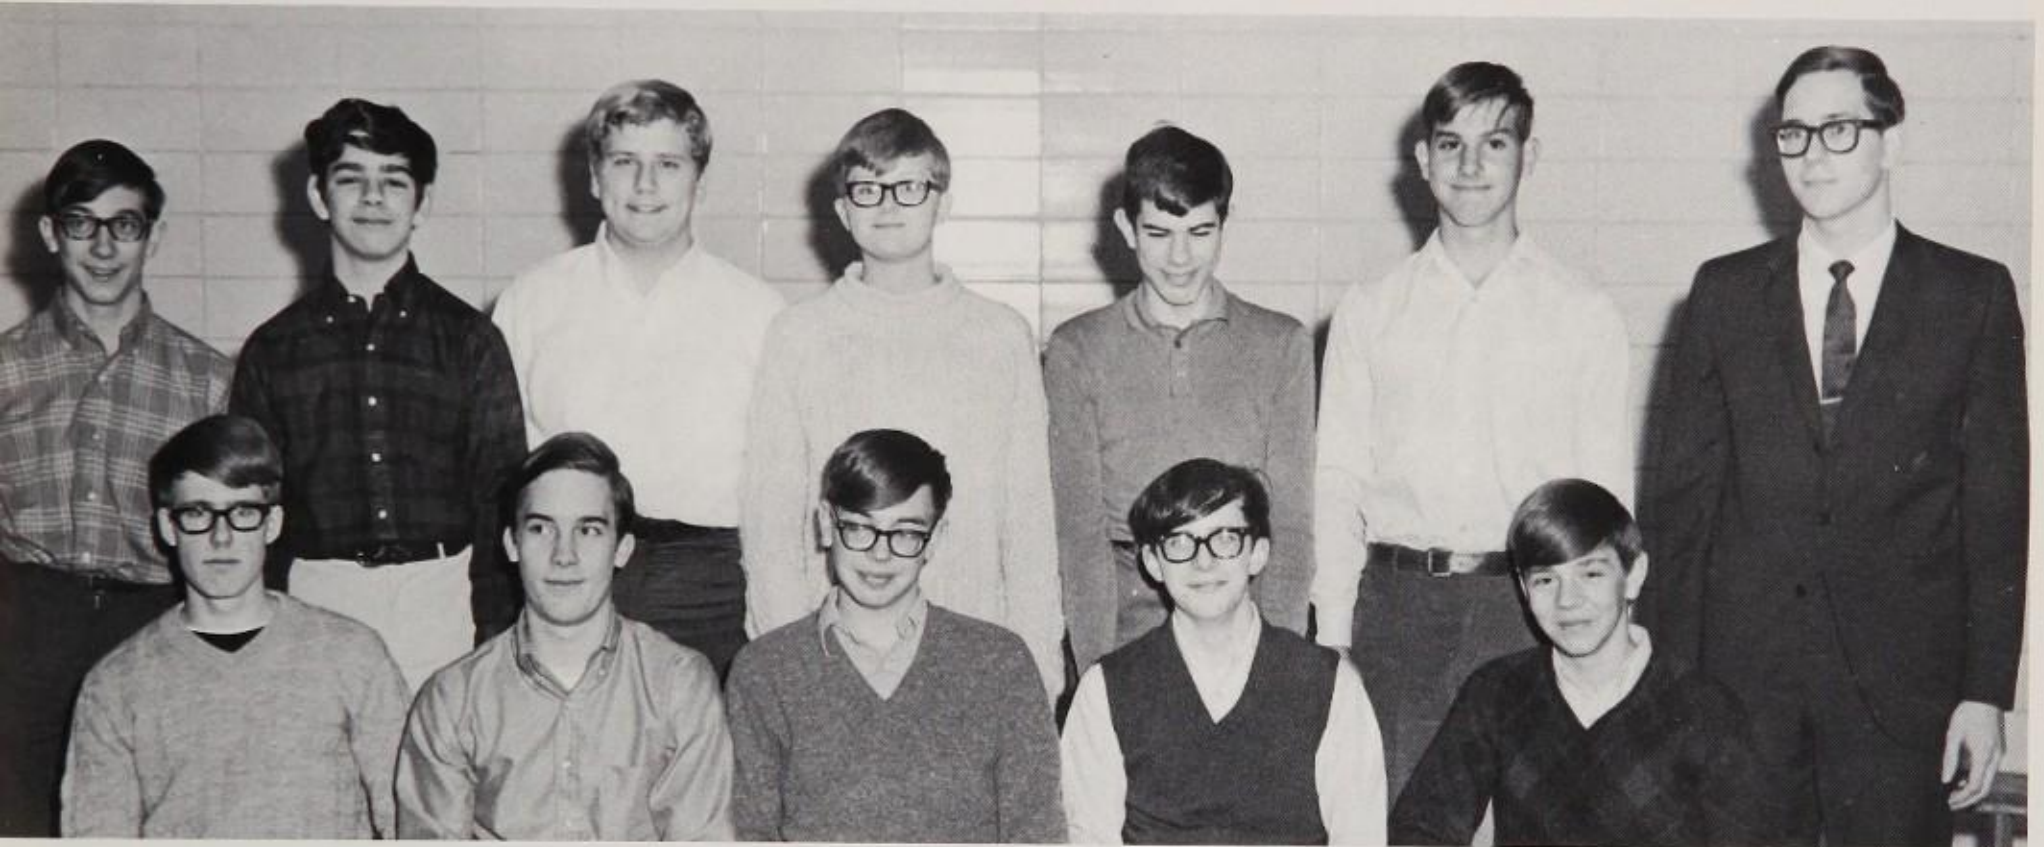

This year's newly-formed North Campus Art Club, unlike South Campus ARS, is not especially interested in developing talent in specific fields of art, but rather it was concerned with broadening the members' entire scope of the field of art. Led by president Pat Madden and sponsor Mr. Nemchok, the members visited a number of galleries including certain exhibits at the Art Institute and several traveling art shows. The club itself also participated in developing a North Campus Art Show and One Man Art Exhibits featuring the work of various students.

Although LTSME ran into some difficulties because of construction, the club was reinstated this year. Electricians found it necessary to occupy the basement of South Campus where the club had a track layout; however, during the first half of the year meetings were concerned with slides on different types of engines and trains, and talks by different members. Directed by sponsor, Mr. Scott Wilseck and president John Orwin, the club worked on the railroad track at South Campus during the second semester and took several field trips.

Food Service Club, new this year, was designed to provide an extra-curricular activity for students who left school early to participate in the work-study program. The membership was composed of the forty students in the Food Service I and II classes. Mary Walby, president and Mrs. Agnes Evans conducted regular business meetings every two weeks. Field trips were scheduled for the South Water Market and an unusual restaurant so that the members could gain a wider perspective of the food service industry.

During the Christmas season, the club baked cookies for the patients in the Illinois Psychiatric Research Hospital. To show their appreciation for their work-study employers, the members treated their bosses to a banquet in the spring.

Sacrificing time and study periods, the Aides did much to keep the services at LT running efficiently. The largest group, the office aides, spent their free periods delivering blue slips and absentee sheets, while the health service aides took temperatures and did paper work. The audio-visual aides maintained and operated classroom equipment, and library aides helped the librarians by checking out books and sending overdue reminders. The door guards used lunch periods to catch up on a little extra homework and supervise traffic in the halls.

ATHLETE

Speed marks athletics at LT. By the very nature of the activities, participation requires agility, accuracy, and determination. An athlete slides down through the tunnel racing to an after-school practice that will demand several hours of all-out effort. A football player faces yet another scrimmage with a mixture of tension and eagerness. A swimmer touches the wall and furiously flips into a turn. A basketball player frantically searches for an opening as he is surrounded by opponents. A runner drops in relief after crossing the finish line. A batter sends the ball far into center field and takes off around the bases. In any season, any sport, the presentation of numerals or a letter glorifies faithful practice and fatigue.

Varsity gridders take third in tough WSC

Improving as the season progressed, the Varsity Football Team finished third in the tough, well-balanced West Suburban Conference with a 5—3 record. Losses to Oak Park and Glenbard West offset a victory over York. Following the Bennet Field dedication ceremonies, the varsity gridders turned back a determined Proviso West squad, 34—7. The team followed this with successive victories over Riverside-Brookfield and Maine East before a loss to powerful Hinsdale Central, 12—7. The varsity ended the season on a dramatic note as Tom Thompson's touchdown pass to Larry Krebs and Joe Murnick's extra point in the final seconds enabled LT to edge Downers Grove, 27—26. Coach J. O. Jackson commented that this year's team was the best group he had ever worked with.

During the R—B Game, Larry Krebs bounds out from nowhere to tackle the ball carrier.

As he spots an open receiver downfield, quarterback Tom Thompson prepares to unload "the bomb".

FS footballers use tough defense to capture crown

Coach Robert Burson referred to this year's Frosh-Soph Football Team as the most talent-laden he has had during his five years of coaching at LT, and the team's 7-1 record substantiates his praise. While a strong defense held its opponents to a meager 53 points in eight games, a potent offense racked up 217 points. The Cubs opened their season with impressive victories over Oak Park and York. A 12-7 upset loss to Glenbard West broke the victory string. Shaking off the defeat, the frosh-soph team successively rolled over Proviso West, Riverside-Brookfield, Maine East, and Hinsdale, and found themselves sharing the conference lead with Downers Grove. The WSC championship was decided in the final game as the Cubs trounced the Downers Grove Ponies, 34-13.

While teammates complete their blocking assignments that will give him the protection he needs, the Frosh-Soph quarterback searches downfield for an open receiver.

Tournament, season victories show soccer improvement

Under the leadership of new coaches, the Varsity and Frosh-Soph Soccer Teams were highly successful this year. Mr. Ray Ingersoll, who had coached the freshman team the preceding year, guided the frosh-soph to an 8—2—1 record. A change in the standard formation, playing one less offensive player than usual in return for an extra defenseman, held the opposition to a minimum number of goals, while the offense retained their well-balanced strength. The large, fast team bounced back after their opening defeat by New Trier East to boast a nearly-undefeated record for the remainder of the season.

Mr. John King, who had previously coached both South Campus teams, took over both North Campus teams this year. Their 7—5—1 record equaled the total number of varsity victories for the previous three years. Though they had only two returning lettermen, the exceptionally fast team outran most of its opponents. Bolstered by a few juniors, the team was especially strong up the middle. The climax of the season was the winning of the championship of the St. Mel Invitational, an eight-team tournament. On the basis of most total goals scored in a two-game match with St. Joseph, LT won the right to keep the traditional Electro-Motive trophy.

Harried by losing their three best runners to the Varsity, the Frosh-Soph Cross Country Team posted a 5—2 record. Although finishing third in tourneys at Maine, Tinley Park, and Willowbrook, the runners finished sixth in the conference. Bill McGowan was elected most valuable runner on the basis of performance at the various meets during the school.

The Varsity Cross Country Team also finished out of contention, ending with a 2—5 record, and sixth place in the conference. Strengthened by veteran senior and returning underclassmen, the varsity harriers placed first in the Titan Invitational at Tinley Park and took third out of twenty-three teams at the Maine East Invitational. Barely missing a chance to go downstate, the team finished third in the district meet to end their season.

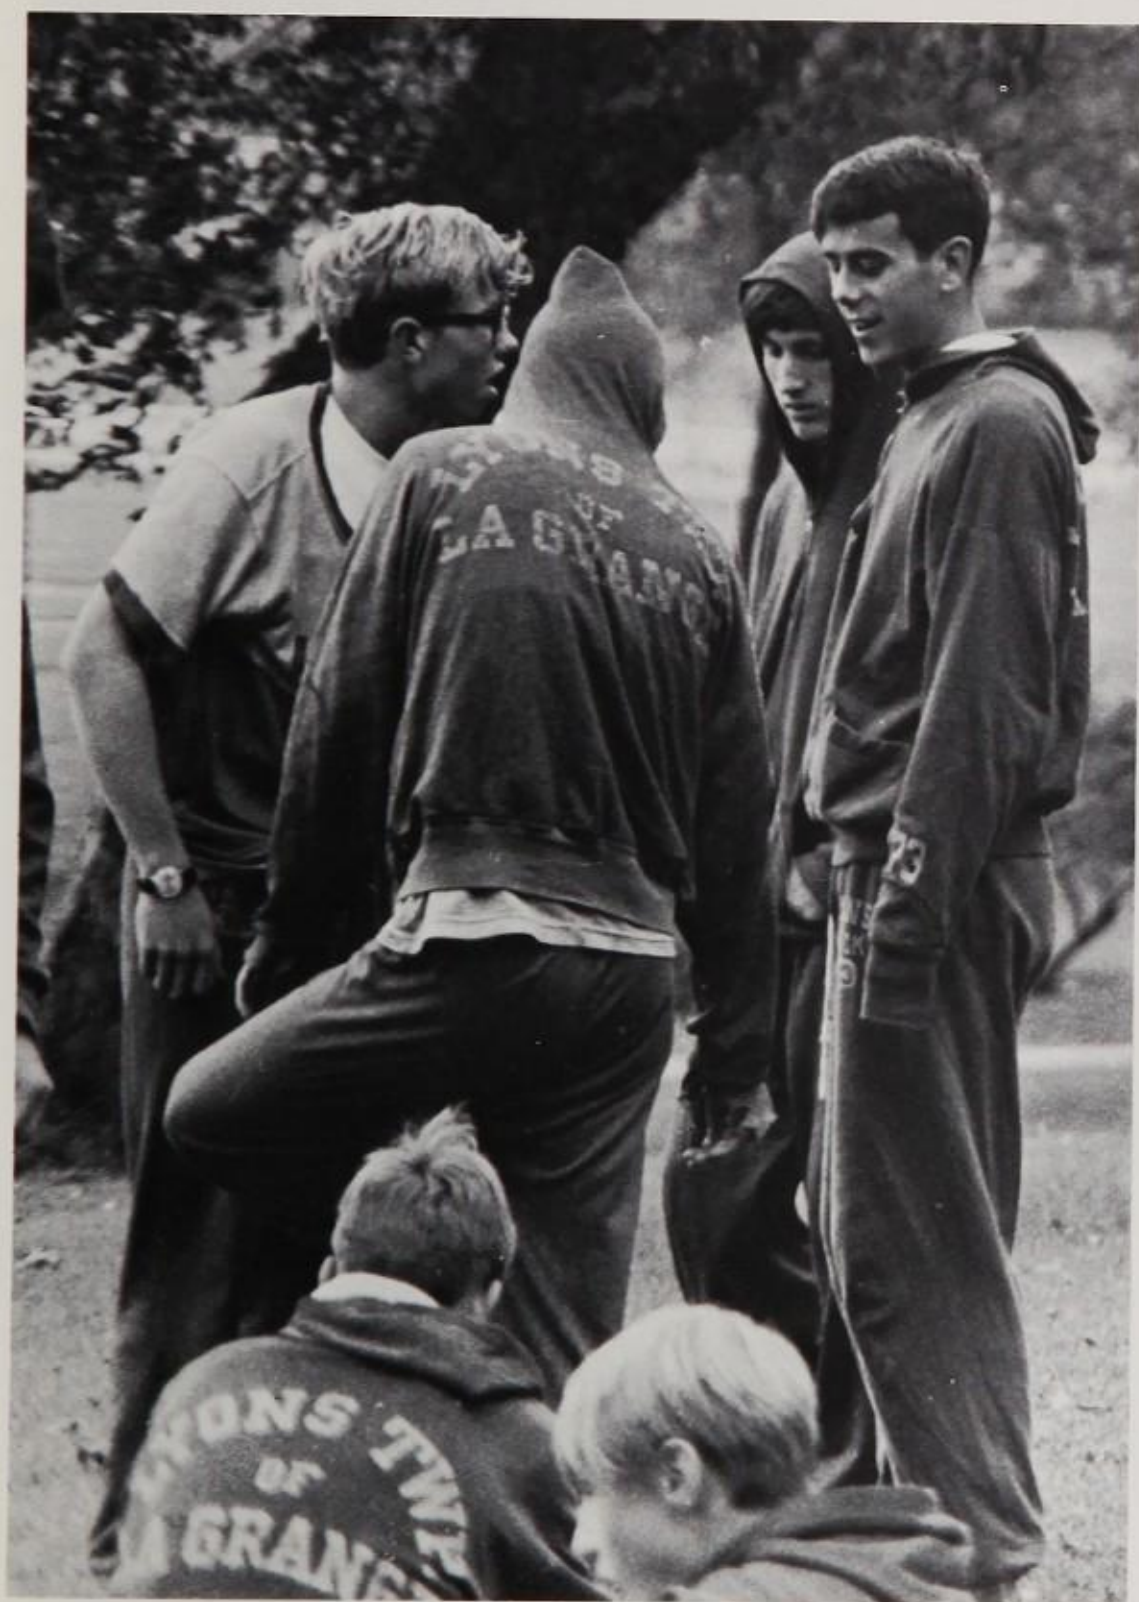

The battle between exhaustion and determination is mirrored in the faces of these cross-country runners as the race nears its climactic finish.

Driving down court after a successful steal of the ball, Bill Bauer tries to convert an opponent's turnover into an LT basket.

Caught napping, the defense waits to see if there will be an opportunity for a rebound of Ken Litwicki's tip-in.

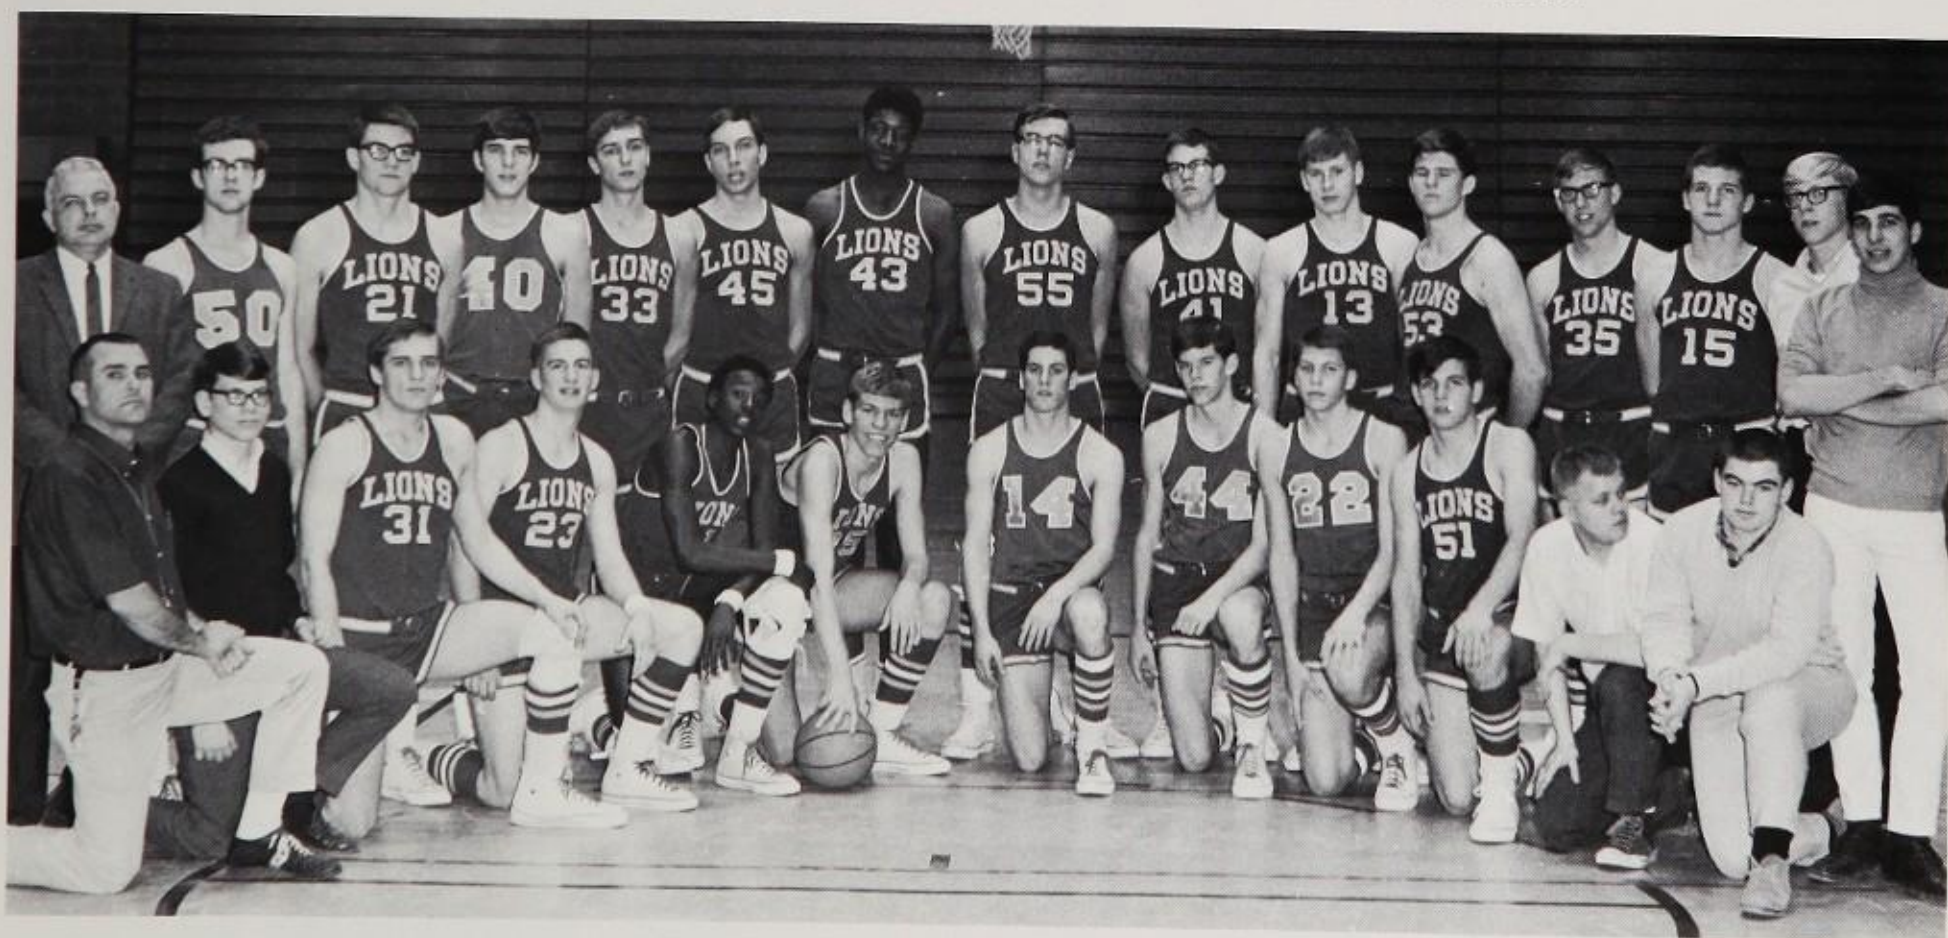

Off the backboard, a loose ball draws a swirl of arms and bodies toward the sought-after rebound.

Cagers repeat as regional champs

Utilizing a balanced scoring attack in which seven players were regulars, the Varsity Basketball Team finished second in the West Suburban Conference. Opening the season against highly-rated non-conference foes, the team defeated Homewood-Flossmoor, lost to tall New Trier East, and surprised Thornton in overtime, 89—83. The Lions opened the conference schedule with victories over York, Glenbard West, and Proviso West before being upset by Riverside-Brookfield.

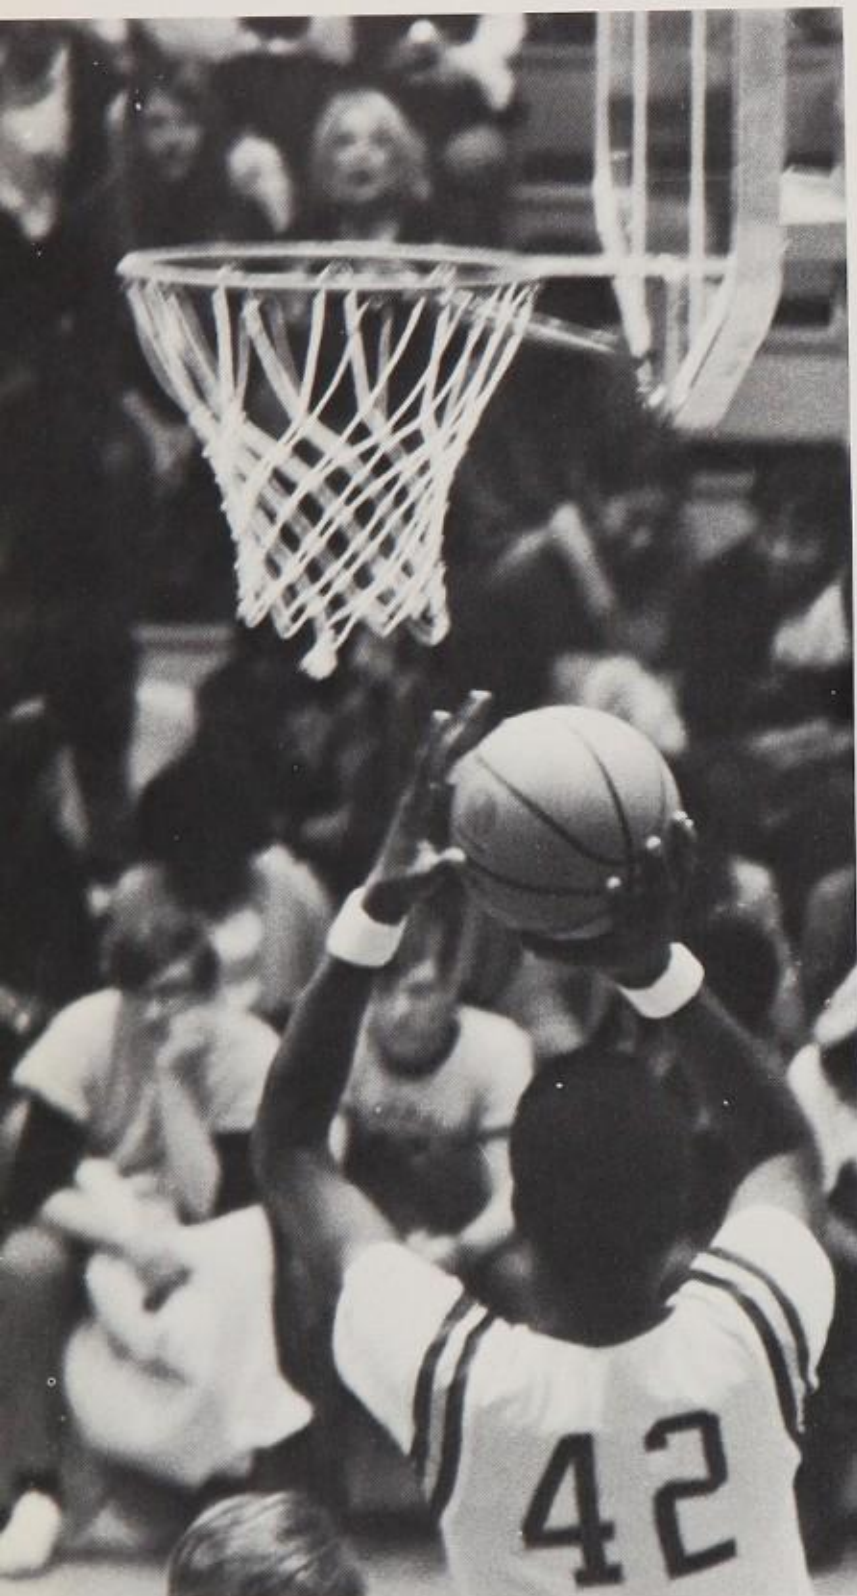

In the Proviso West Holiday Tournament, the Lions clawed into the finals with victories over Lake Forest, Evanston, and Elgin. Here they were stopped by top-ranked Proviso East, 67—51. Opening the new year, the basketballers turned back Maine East and inaugurated the new fieldhouse with a conquest of Hinsdale Central and a double overtime loss to Downers Grove North.

A narrow victory over York convinced Coach Art Sandusky that a change was necessary. Alteration of the starting lineup produced victories over Glenbard, RB, Maine, and Hinsdale, setting the stage for the title showdown with Downers. The invading Lions never got started, and the Trojans captured the championship with a surprising 71—57 victory. Undaunted by this setback, the cagers repeated as regional champs by defeating Stagg, Chicago Christian and coming from behind to trip Argo in overtime, 66—64 in the finals. In sectional play the Lions overturned Timothy Christian, 67—66, before a second loss to Proviso East ended the '68-'69 season.

Head and shoulders above the opposition, center Owen Brown is about to connect for an easy two points.

A shot from the corner takes on an added importance as time dwindles in a close game.

While his teammates try for an advantageous rebound position, Scott Keeve lofts the ball toward the basket with an easy 10-foot jump shot.

Sizing up their opponents, the Lions squeeze in those last few practice shots before the buzzer summons them to a sideline conference with the coach.

Stimulating interest in Freshman basketball, both the A and B teams reigned as conference champs this year. Coach Richard Leiber's A squad gained a share of first place with Hinsdale by posting a 9—2 conference slate and an overall record of 11—5. Not to be outdone, Coach Harold Erickson's B team was undefeated in conference play, registering eleven victories and taking sole possession of the championship. The B team's season record was an impressive 14—2.

Undaunted by early defeats, the Frosh-Soph Basketball Team finished the season with a 13—6 record. Though confined to third place in West Suburban play with a 10—4 record, the Cubs prevented Hinsdale from winning the crown by tallying two upsets over the Imps, including an overtime cliff-hanger on opponents' grounds.

Spear-heading the Cubs' attack were most valuable player, Steve Heinzelman, leading rebounder, and captain Dave Van Skike, the team's high scorer.

With their eyes riveted to the ball, frosh-soph cagers poise for the jump.

A rigorous early-morning swim gives the team a chance to limber up and smooth out their performance for an upcoming meet.

Confronted by an Olympic swimmer from Hinsdale Central, a fire on the team bus, non-existent locker facilities, no transportation to the first meet, and no diving board at the beginning of the season, the Swim Teams nevertheless compiled one of their best records in conference meets and did their best ever in state competition. Although they were disappointed in their hopes that the pool would be completed in time to give the Sea Lions a permanent home, new varsity coach Mr. Jon Weber and returning Frosh-Soph coach Mr. Kenneth Lumb were able to send four swimmers to the state eliminations, where senior Jim Fieldhouse and sophomore Bill McGowan qualified. Fieldhouse scored second and seventh place while McGowan placed fourth and seventh to give LT a tenth place in the state meet. The hard work of the swimmers who practiced every morning from 7:00 to 8:30 in a crowded YMCA pool and had to travel to other schools for every meet was rewarded by a third place finish in sophomore conference competition, while the varsity swam second only to the always strong Hinsdale team.

Knowing very well that a good take-off could give him a stroke advantage, an LT swimmer puts forth his best effort, even though it's only practice.

Wrestlers advance six to sectional tourney

After a discouraging year, the Freshman Wrestling Team was determined to use the experience they gained from competition and to develop the talents of the team members in preparation for next year's Sophomore team. The Freshman matmen fell to each opponent and finished in the cellar of the West Suburban Conference. Coach Lewis Hankenson hopes that a proposed summer wrestling program will gain the support of the team.

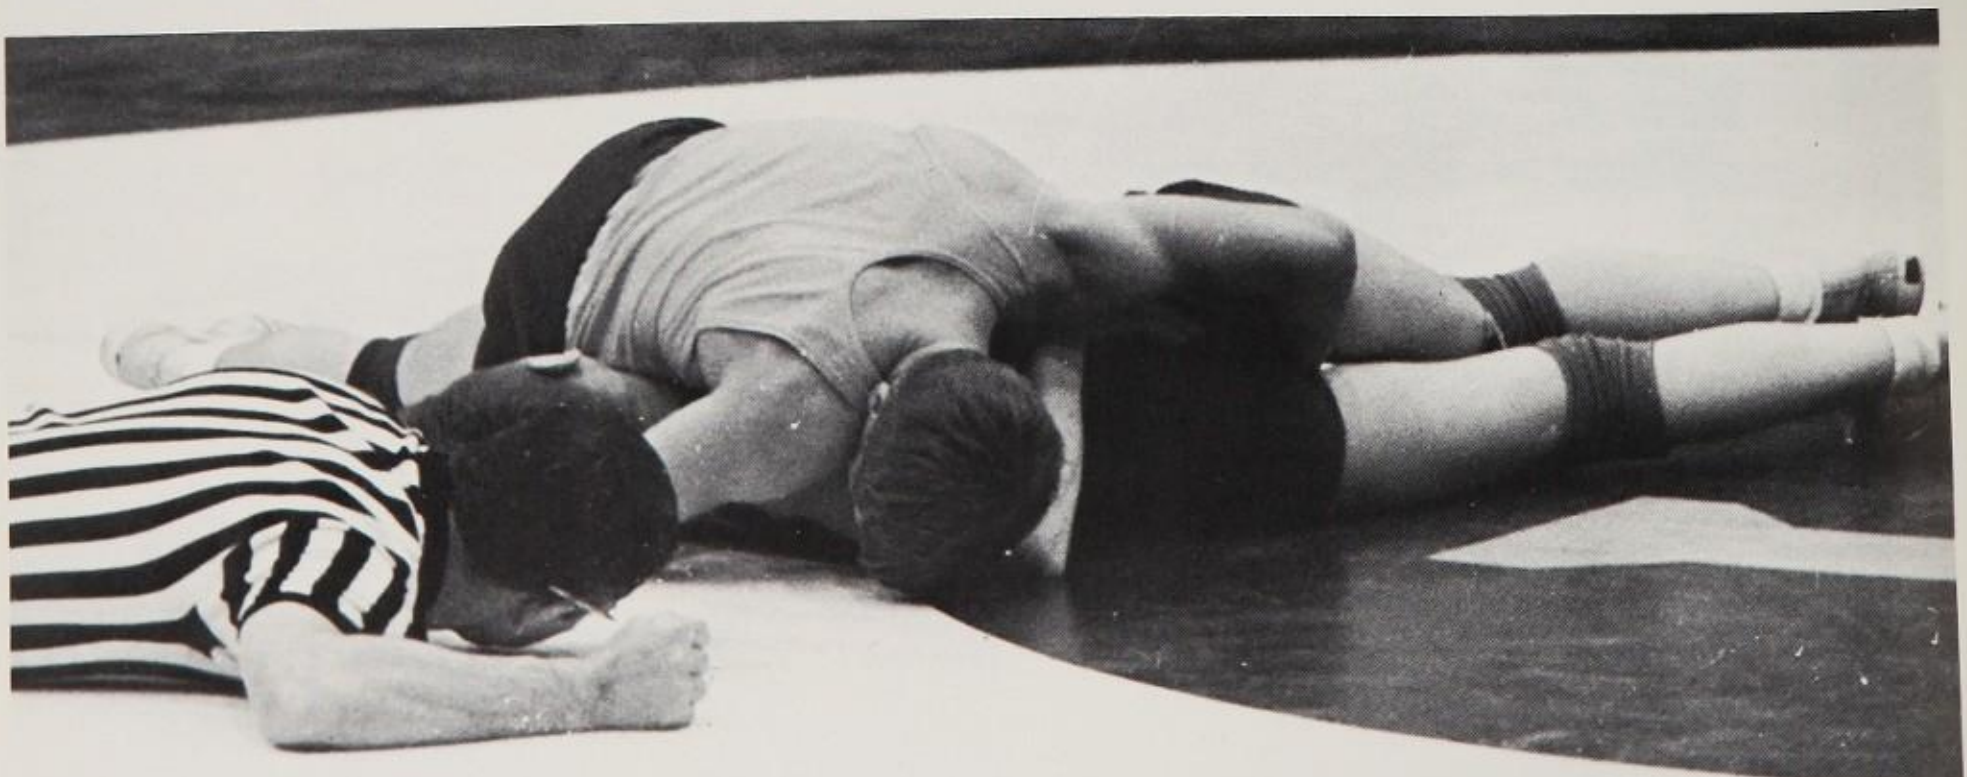

The Sophomore Wrestling Team, which is coached by Mr. Art Suchomel, had a more encouraging season. Their 14—4 record and 6—1 conference record found them co-champs in the conference along with Maine East and Proviso West. Most Valuable Wrestler was Bill Fleming, and Dave Benhart won the honors for the most pins.

After an opening loss to Proviso East, the Varsity Wrestling Team pinned the Morton East grapplers to a score of 33—11. During the remainder of the season, the LT wrestlers were sporadic and completed the season with a 6—12 record.

In district competition, they captured four firsts and two seconds, sending six men to the sectional meet. Junior Rick Snow eventually was sent to the state meet.

Straining to the utmost, an opponent vainly tries to break an LT wrist-lock during a home meet.

The chance for an LT pin increases as the referee watches the space between a York wrestler's shoulder and floor narrow.

Gymnasts tumble to seventh in conference

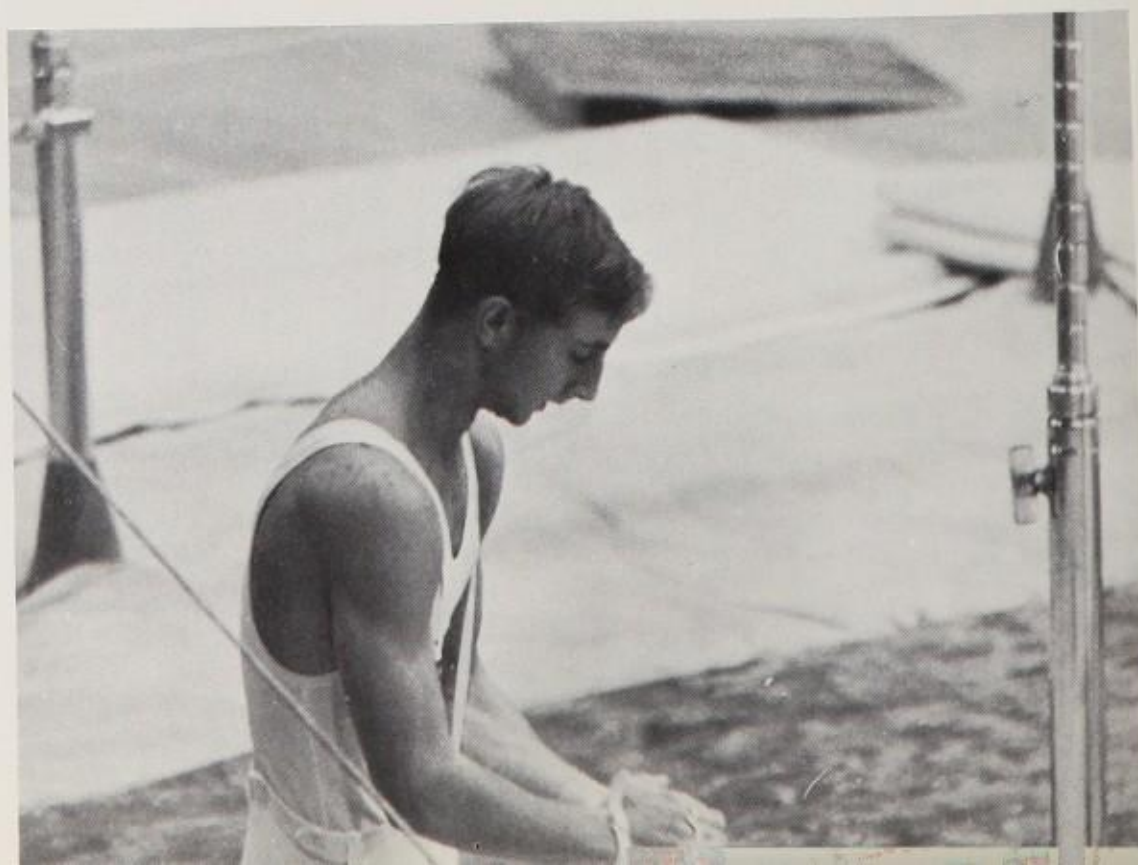

Construction at both campuses, which has doubled the previous available facilities, greatly aided the Gymnastics Team this year. At North Campus, the varsity team, coached by Mr. Ray Ingersoll, compiled a total meet record of 5—8. The team, which was largely made up of underclassmen, consisted of four seniors, fourteen juniors, and one sophomore. Out of this group, five members represented LT at the conference meet, where they earned a sixth place finish. Despite a sprained ankle, senior Paul Foran qualified for participation at the state meet on March 15th, where he placed seventeenth.

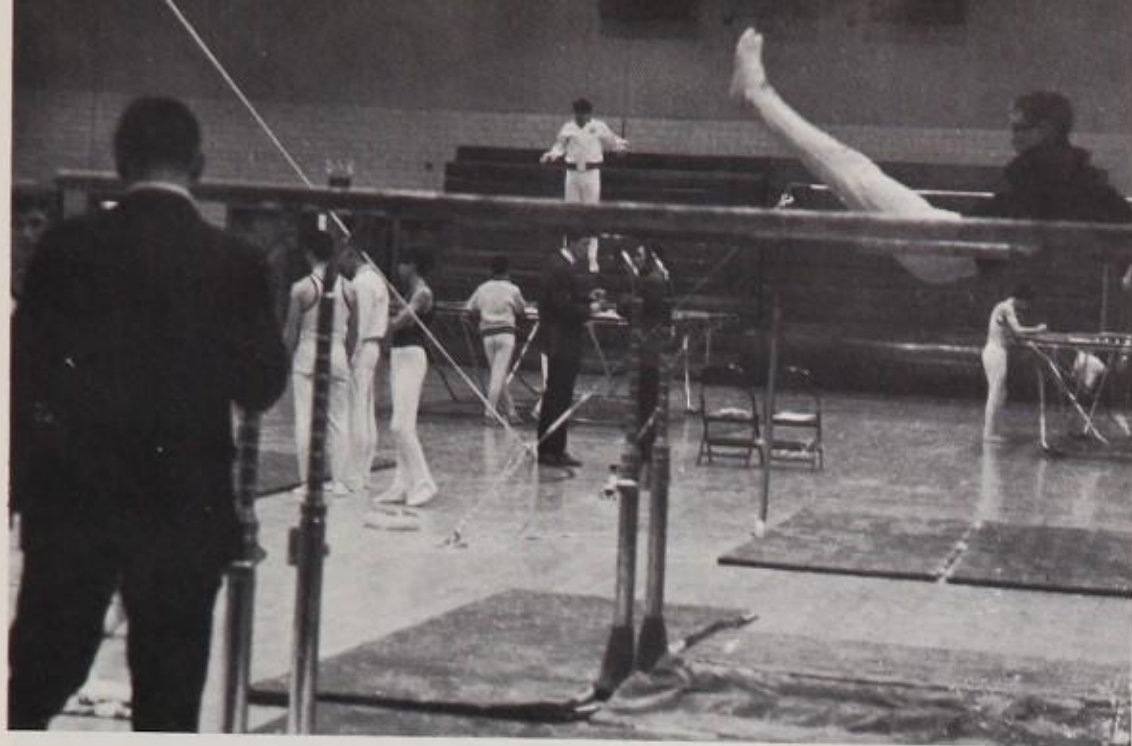

The Frosh-Soph team, coached by Duane Foster, reversed the varsity record with an 8—5 finish, which made it the best showing in the team's history. The season was marked by close scores, including a disappointing one-point loss to Glenbard East. The team finished fourth in the conference meet. Sophomore Don Rose was elected as the team's most valuable member.

Fieldhouse provides new home for LT track teams

With the new fieldhouse completed, the Indoor Track Team was able to have their first home meet in the team's history. A full schedule of challenging encounters with other schools provided many opportunities for coaches James Kilbreth, Max Armor, and J. O. Jackson to prepare their team for the outdoor season.

Beginning the Outdoor Track Team's season with a sixth place indoor conference rank, the varsity squad, led by twelve returning lettermen, tried to stave off the attacks of York, Glenbard, and Proviso West to take fifth place.

The strong sophomore squad rallied to the first-place conference crown during the indoor season and hoped to remain tops in the outdoor competition by overpowering the same teams that threatened the varsity team.

Confident of the advantage that their new but now familiar home track will give them, F-S track members await the arrival of their opponents on a delayed bus.

Coach Richard Leiber strove to make hard work and co-ordinated team effort result in another conference crown for this year's Varsity Baseball Team. Aided by Bill Bauer and Nat Gilbert, veterans from last year's conference championship varsity team, the team used a solid infield and pitching as the main key to their defense. Their strategy not only hinged upon outstanding hitters but also depth in the battery order. Seven other returning lettermen and several talented underclassmen rounded out the team as it strove toward another winning season. The Frosh-Soph Baseball Team, under the direction of coach Robert Burson, anticipated close competition with other powerful conference schools, including R-B and Glenbard West. Early in the season the Cubs were confident that victory over these teams would be possible if their powerful hitting could be matched by greater skill in pitching and a desire to win.

New courts raise varsity, frosh-soph tennis hopes

With the availability of the eight newly constructed tennis courts, the consistently highly rated Tennis Teams were able to stop using the municipal courts that were necessary last year. At South Campus five returning sophomore players gave the team the experience needed to better last year's second place finish. Although the team and Coach Paul Nemecek worked especially hard on the fundamentals of the sport necessary to insure success in the future, they were handicapped at the beginning by the loss of one sophomore to the varsity squad.

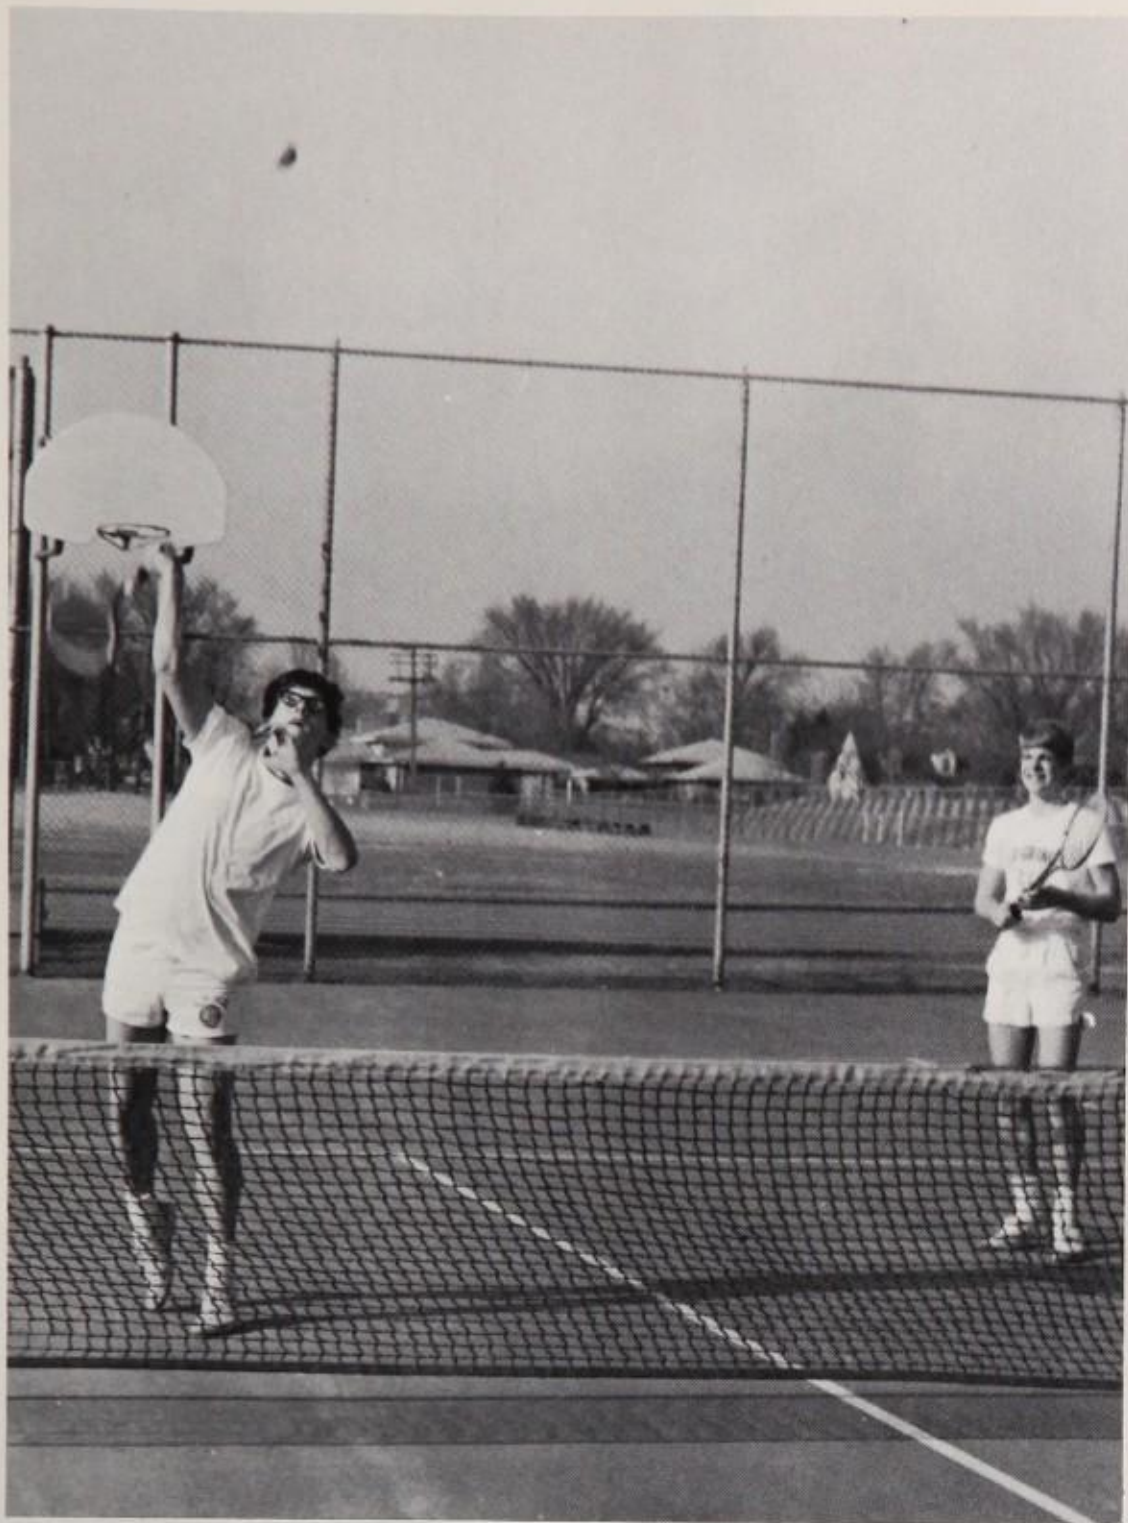

The North Campus team, under the coaching of Mr. Carl Nemecek, made use of the experience of the three returning lettermen and fresh talent from juniors to better their fifth place finish of last year. With indoor drills starting the season's long hours of practice, the team members worked to coordinate doubles play and to strengthen singles matches in hopes of christening the new courts with a first place in the conference.

The strain shown on Bill Lynch's face reveals the demands of trying to recondition muscles during an early spring workout.

Cold-weather practice sessions ready linksters for season

Well planted feet, a proper grip, and an eye on the ball constitute a few warm-up putts before this golfer goes out on the course.

With three returning lettermen and several other veteran golfers at its core, coach Mr. Bert Kraus expected the Varsity Golf Team to finish high in the conference standings. Hours of practice on the local courses helped the team to develop the skills and proficiency necessary in order to competently challenge the other strong teams in the conference.

The Frosh-Soph Golf Team utilized the experience of its second-year men to make a good showing in the conference standing. Coach Arthur Suchomel employed the sophomore players early in the season in order to give the freshmen some experience in interscholastic competition.

In an effort to remedy any noticeable short comings in his form, a Frosh-Soph golfer enlists the aid of his onlooking teammates.

Practice time almost over, a golf team member uses his last moments to take a few swings before going out on the slightly green but soggy links.

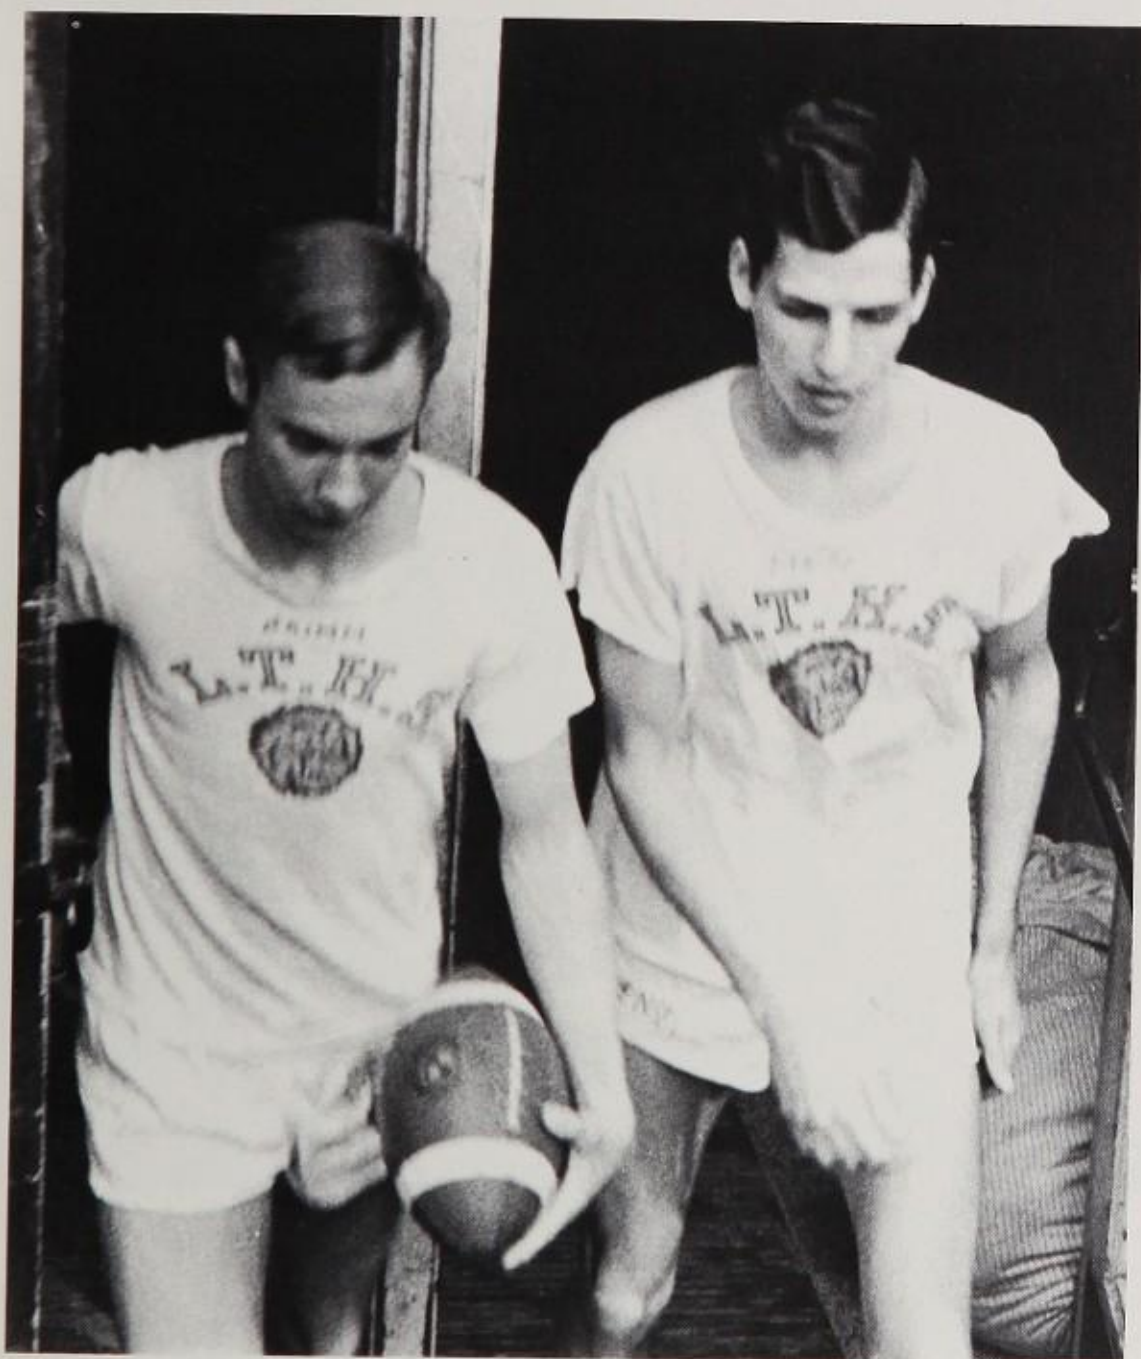

Monday evening's studies are relegated second position to a "choose-up" game of intramural basketball.

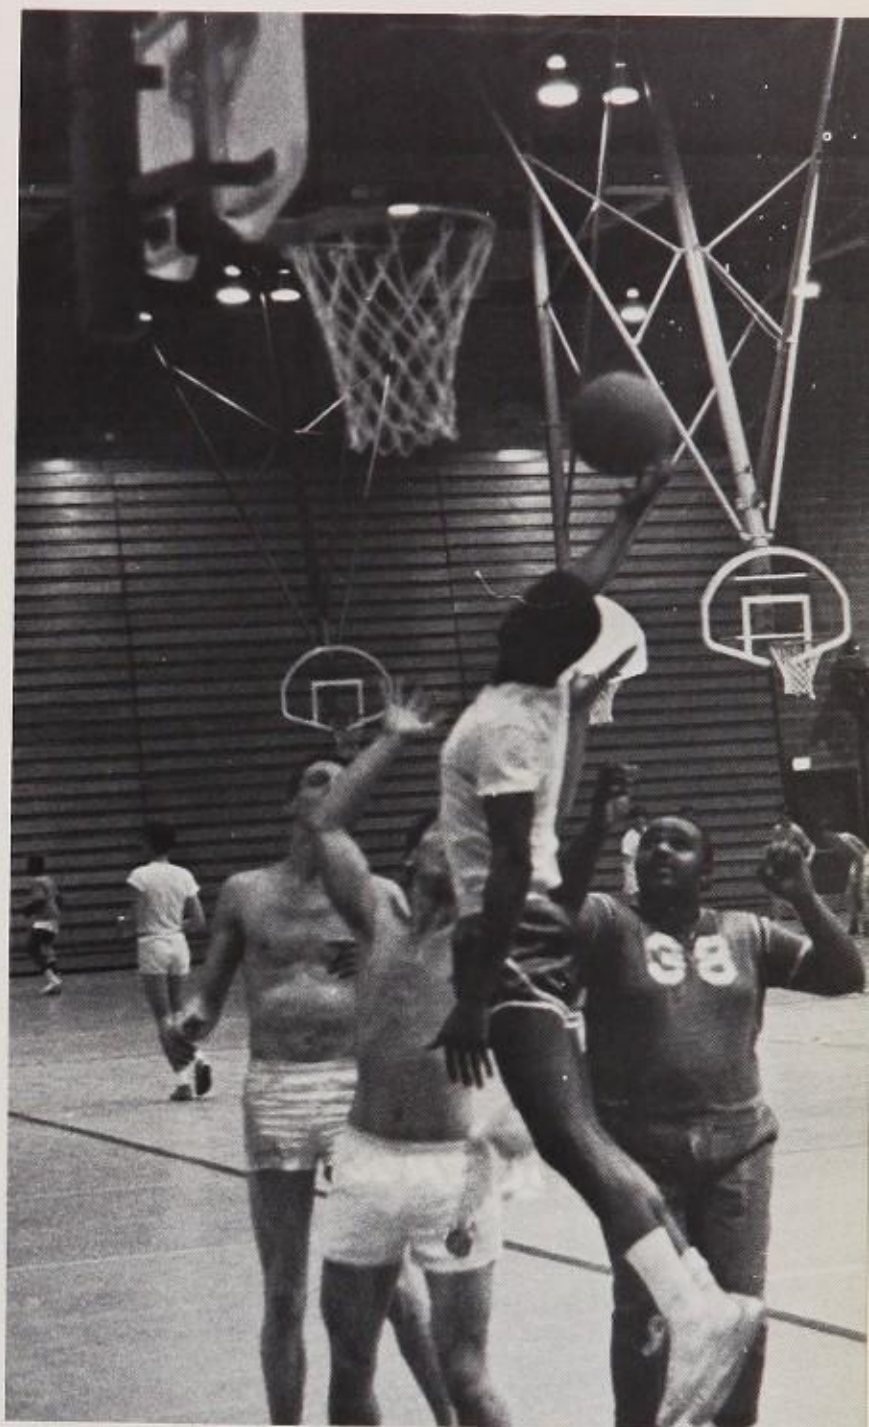

Dropping back toward the basket, the "skins" find that they have left an opening in their defense—a mistake a "shirt" player quickly capitalizes on.

Competition, fitness stressed by intramurals

Intramurals were offered as a supplement to the required physical education program this year. A fall tennis tournament opened activities. Twenty-one singles players and eight doubles teams competed in this elimination tournament. Also during the fall, intramural basketball, and for the first time, touch football were offered. Touch football games were held at Gilbert Park after school on weekdays. During the winter, the gyms were opened for free play basketball and weightlifting. In the spring both softball and weightlifting were available at the intramural level. The expansion of physical education facilities at both North and South Campuses has enabled chairman Mr. Glick to foresee an expanded intramural program in the near future.

First out of the locker room, Don Hensel and Bob Grimm hurry to the field for a warmup before their intramural flag football game.

Lettermen accept duties with privileges

Opening as one of LT's most active organizations, Lettermen's Club completed the year with greater participation and several innovations. In September the club sponsored "See What the Future Holds For You," the Kickoff dance, which enjoyed one of the largest attendance figures of dances during the year. At monthly meetings members planned various activities crystallized under the supervision of sponsor Mr. J. O. Jackson and president Mark Meyer. In contrast to rather unglamorous duties of holding ropes and sweeping the floor at basketball games were the honors of escorting the Homecoming queen and her court at the pep assembly and the game. New this year was the "Mr. Legs" contest held in conjunction with the co-sponsorship of the Senior-faculty basketball game held in February. The winner was determined by the greatest amount of money received from the student voters; proceeds were donated to the Gary Steger fund established to pay hospital expenses incurred after a freak football accident.

Lettermen brace themselves for the inevitable onrush of basketball spectators about to swarm down from the bleachers as the end of the first half nears.

Cheering sections augmented by second-year Pep Club

Under the guidance of sponsors Mrs. Robin Cichy and Mr. Dennis Deegan and president Kathy Nimitz, Pep Club completed its second year with increased participation. Operating under a motto of "organized wildness," members worked together to carry out such projects as raising funds to finance equipment for the athletic department, and sponsoring buses for games held at other schools. The members publicized athletic events in football, basketball, and spring sports seasons with posters displayed throughout the school. In the spring buttons were sold to promote spirit in all students.

Concerned about the evident apathy among LT students, Gwen Dawson elicits suggestions for increased school spirit from Pep Club members.

Curtailed facilities, program characterize GAA year

A combination of circumstances enabled the Girls' Athletic Association at each campus to become a more interworking, unified body this year. For the first time, combined board meetings were held once a month. Because the construction at North eliminated the usual facilities there, a South Campus gym was set aside a few evenings each week for the use of underclass GAA members.

The year started off well as the GAA Homecoming float, "Tis Time . . .", won first place in the Gold Division. Dad 'n' Daughter Night, held at South, was an opportunity for fathers and daughters to spend an enjoyable evening together competing in various games and relays, and was topped by a potluck dinner. An afternoon Mother-Daughter Christmas Tea furnished refreshments and provided entertainment consisting of skits and exhibitions. "Actives" parties were held for those members compiling a specified number of points through their participation in the activities. In the spring, those girls earning enough points during the year received awards at the Mother-Daughter Banquet.

GAA float: award-winning combination of feminine talent

The success of the Physical Education Department, hampered this year by construction, depended on the guidance and performance of the Senior Leaders. While enjoying the honor and privilege of being chosen leaders, they also have the responsibility of assisting in a girls' physical education class and aiding in after-school GAA activities. At least a "C" average in other courses must be maintained, and girls must exhibit good leadership qualities. Along with teaching a class for credit, the girls in red shorts attend a leadership class twice a week in order to learn the fundamentals of physical education.

Yell leaders, twirlers enliven b-ball halftimes

Under the leadership of captain Wendy Andorf, the Twirlers worked to provide entertainment at concerts and athletic events. Hard work at the semi-weekly practices paid off particularly for Olivia Gade and Wendy Andorf, who performed together in the state competition in March. This year the four girls set a precedent by introducing flag batons into their routines, as well as employing two-baton techniques. Other duties of the group, sponsored by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, included marching in various community parades throughout the year.

Wrestling Cheerleaders increased their membership by two girls this year, enabling the group, under the sponsorship of Mrs. Pamela Harding, to perform a greater variety of cheers in the 1968-69 season. Many hours of practice spent perfecting both skills and timing were evident at the wrestling meets and junior varsity basketball games, where they performed under captain Pat Ganzer and co-captain Nancy Hatch. This year was terminated by cheering at the last varsity basketball game of the year.

Increased concern for school spirit was to be found this year in the Boy Yell Leaders, sponsored by Mrs. Nancy Sprague. Props for their routines include a borrowed tricycle, bugles, a megaphone discovered in the North Campus attic, and a gold and blue striped garbage can, all of which facilitated the boys in the concoction of impromptu skits.

Neither rain, nor cold, nor toilet paper streamers, nor hoarse throats could hinder the Cheerleaders in their efforts to encourage and supplement crowd participation at football and basketball games. Under the direction of new sponsor Mrs. Pamela Harding, they began the year with the addition of two girls at each campus and long-awaited new uniforms for varsity squad members.

Striving for precision and a style that would both entertain and involve those in the stands, the two groups engaged in weekly practices under the leadership of captains Jill Korous and Nancy Cowley. The season began with the dedication game, at which the cheerleaders handled the sale of programs. Homecoming weekend was highlighted by a routine of mock yells which the North Campus girls performed at the pep assembly. At the beginning of the basketball season, newly-selected freshmen joined sophomores to form two divisions which shared responsibilities at the frosh-soph games. Pot-luck suppers were held before each home game, including a Christmas party with Pom Pon Squad. A year of enthusiastic leadership was brought to an end when senior cheerleaders were recognized at the last home games for their hours of work and efforts to boost school spirit.

In an effort to involve more girls and utilize their talents, the 1968-69 season saw enlarged Pom Pon Squads at both campuses. At South Campus, the newly-formed frosh-soph squad, under the direction of Miss Marie Cikanic, was introduced to the rigors of inventing and learning different dance steps for half-time performances. Headed by captain Debbie Burditt and co-captain Barb Butterfield, the sixteen girls presented routines at home football games and shared responsibilities with the varsity squad during the basketball season.

At North Campus, several additional members were initiated into the now totally-upperclass squad. Practices were held each week under the direction of captain Roberta Snelling and co-captain Jan Thunack in preparation for weekend games. Skirts were ordered to complete the uniforms which incorporated the new sweaters received last year and arrived in time for the basketball season. At the end of the year, senior members and sponsors Miss Penny Sullivan and Miss Martha Stout conducted workshops and tryouts for hopefuls for next year's squad.

ACADE

Speed marks academics at LT. A frantic rush to complete an assignment in a study hall is punishment for watching a favorite TV program. A week of late-night study precedes the due date of a term paper or book report. An exchange of opinions after a class discussion is often followed by a race to the next classroom. The necessity of a carefully-planned, annually-revised four-year schedule becomes evident with the realization that time for desired electives is increasingly limited. With June comes the apprehension that a few days will not be sufficient time to review a year's supply of new information for final exams. The tests are soon over, however, and the seemingly never-ending periods, as well as the enjoyable ones, have expired.

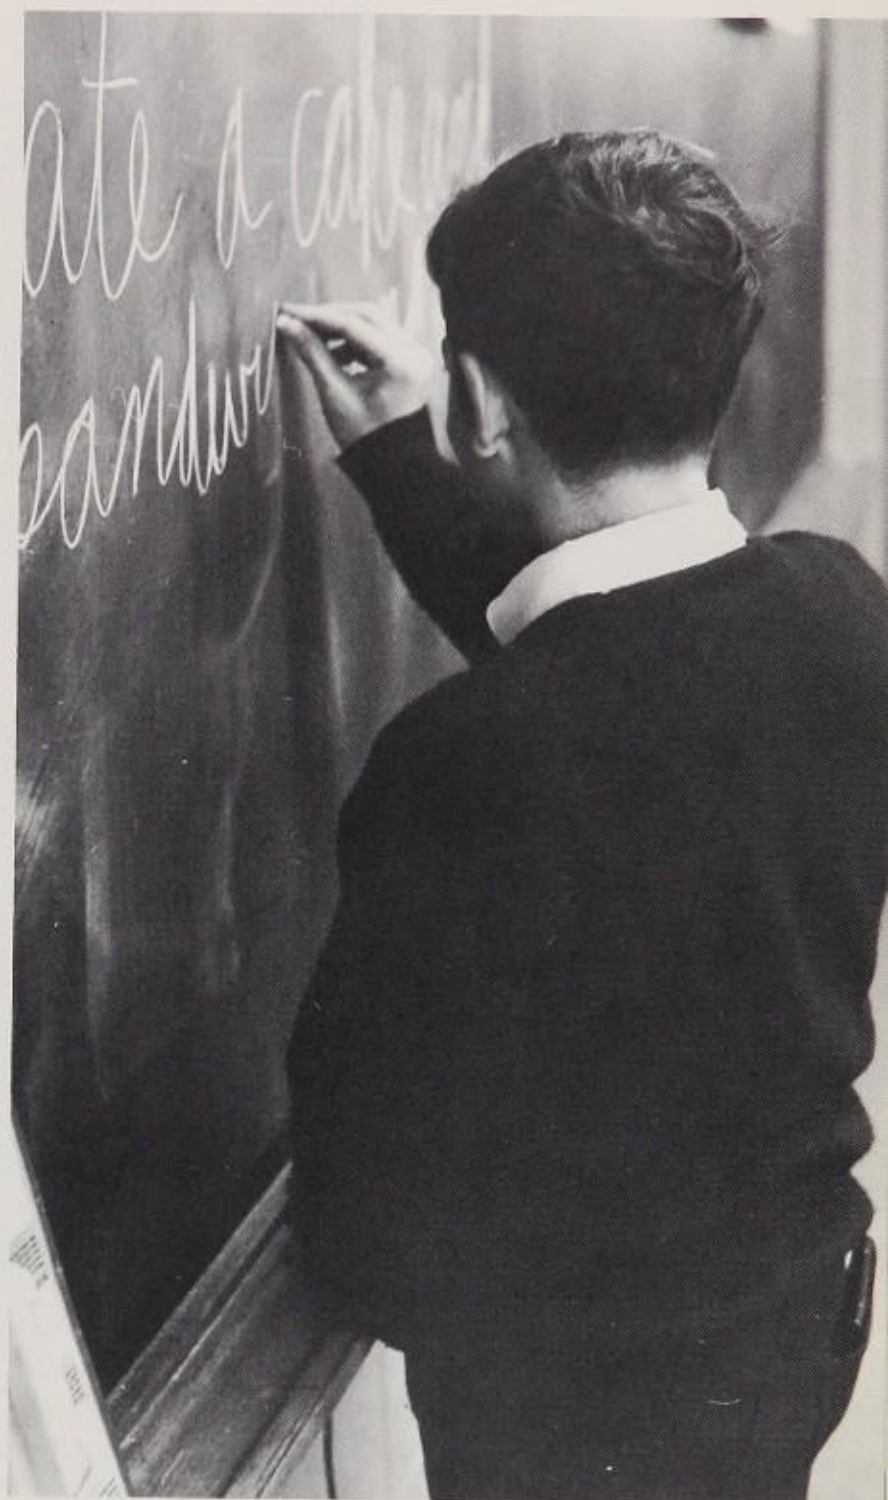

MICS

Academics speed maturity of students

Administrators orient classes to new facilities, difficulties

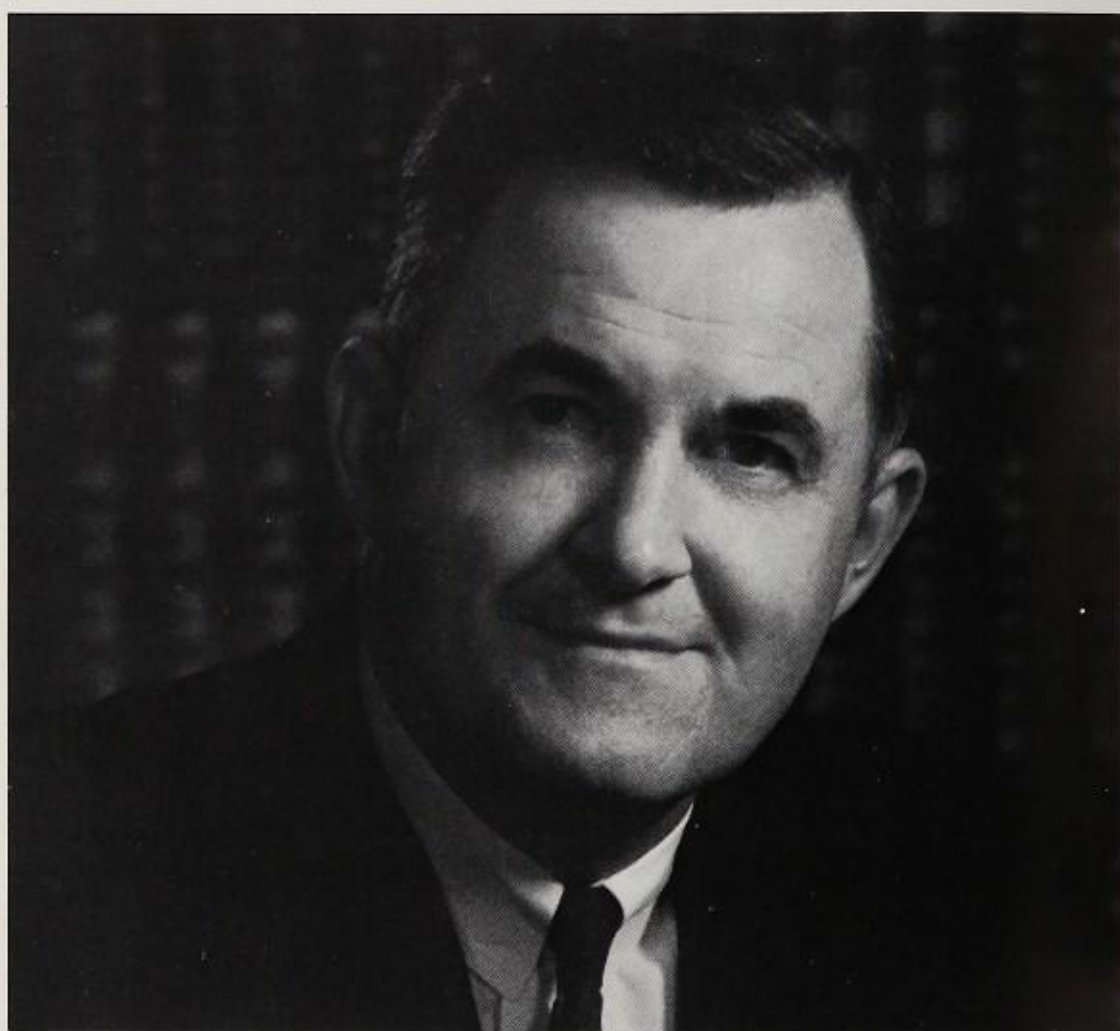

This year the Administration faced situations unique in the history of LT. The junior college no longer shared North Campus with the school, and many classrooms and parking spaces were freed for LT students. However, there was less space than ever before because of construction. Although the school continued to operate under some handicaps throughout the year, changes and improvements in the building were constantly being completed. Difficult traffic patterns existed at both campuses, causing passing time between periods to be lengthened to six minutes. Students, convinced of the need for expanded accommodations, co-operated with the administrators to eliminate as many problems as possible.

Included in the new facilities were seminar rooms and better-equipped offices for all academic departments. The use of many additional mechanical devices demonstrated the desire for modernization and permitted more experimentation. A public address system was installed at each campus to improve communications and to allow announcements and instructional tapes to be played from a central control station.

It was a year for innovations, experimentation with flexible scheduling, opportunities for independent research, as well as the usual re-evaluation of the curriculum. As progress continued, the Administration helped the school adjust and prepare for the advantages which were soon to become available.

John Zolk's absence the day before requires a stop at the dean's office prior to beginning his day's classes and any necessary make-up work.

In its aim to carry out the responsibilities of schedule planning, guidance, and advice on college admissions procedures, the Department of Pupil Services sought to personalize LT for its vast enrollment. Aptitude tests administered in Freshmen Social Studies, where students were first introduced to the various aspects of high school life, provided the initial opportunity for the participant to analyze his skills and talents. The annual Career Day programmed for upperclassmen gave each student a chance to explore his range of interests by hearing speakers from a variety of professions. Achievement tests and round-table discussions which were sponsored by several departments helped guide the individual student in making decisions about the future. The department continued to offer consultations with many college and business representatives. Throughout the four years, counselors met with students in private interviews in an effort to bring pupils to realistic self-evaluation and, hopefully, to more clearly-defined goals.

English Department adds team teaching, new classroom design

In its aim to serve the students' needs by offering a broadly-varied curriculum, the English Department was aided by new facilities and techniques of teaching. The team teaching program, under the direction of department chairman, Mr. Aldo Mungai, was expanded from the previously experimental use to include more North Campus classes. Audio-visual material, independent study, and variable class groupings were incorporated as the project developed to combine their strengths.

New classrooms were designed to better serve the changing needs of the department. Folding partitions were installed between double rooms to permit greater classroom versatility. Speech students had the opportunity to use tape recorders to analyze individual oral weaknesses. New audio-visual equipment, purchased for the use of the English Department exclusively, became more readily accessible to teachers than in previous years. With the addition of new suites of rooms, more efficient functioning was made possible in department offices and reading rooms. Such improvements aided the department in its attempt to provide a wider range of learning opportunities.

The students of both North and South Campuses eagerly awaited the completion of the split-level modern Library, which was constructed at the former location of the North Campus girls' gymnasium. The expansion of course plans and the growing size of the student body put an increasingly heavy burden on the LT library system and the staff, which is headed by Mr. Charles Koch. Students will be able to expect 17,000 square feet of improved and updated facilities with individually specialized rooms for such educational areas as audio-visual communications, fine arts and literature, social studies, mathematics, and science. In addition, a special library will be provided specifically for faculty members.

Meanwhile, the students' exhibition of co-operation and courtesy helped alleviate the problems accompanying the lack of space resulting from more books and periodicals coming into LT's expanding library.

Language Dept. aims for awareness of foreign cultures, languages

With the addition of new facilities, this year's Language Department, headed by Miss Eloise Birney, offered a more varied curriculum. The new language laboratory at South Campus and the one at North Campus enabled students to increase their oral-aural comprehension. Work and conference rooms made possible private consultations between students and teachers. The use of films, tape recordings, foreign magazines, and supplemental reading materials provided students with historical and cultural background. This type of foundation deepened the pupil's awareness of his heritage and that of the language studied.

Students interested in obtaining greater knowledge of another country and its people had the opportunity to participate in study programs abroad. Through these summer experiences, pupils gained knowledge beyond that available in the classroom.

Social Studies Department

This year's Social Studies Department, headed by newly-appointed chairman Mr. Arthur Sprague, sought more than ever to instill in students a deeper insight into the problems of the world, especially those problems based on misunderstanding. Faculty members attempted to show pupils the importance of increased involvement in the solution of these problems.

A new textbook used in half of the American History classes emphasized the role and contributions of minority groups in our history and culture. The departmental policy of incorporating extensive supplemental reading matter and encouraging students to do independent research was continued. In addition, new courses in philosophy and leadership training were introduced to broaden the scope of the curriculum. In these ways, the department strove to make more knowledge attainable by the students in order that it might be used in the future to help in the constructive solutions to world problems.

New courses, texts emphasize involvement in world affairs

Although the LaGrange Area Department of Special Education was not officially part of LT, the services of this department provided invaluable aid to the mentally and physically handicapped students of the area as well as to the socially maladjusted. The department itself, which was headed by Mr. C. Lewis Martin, co-ordinated the special education programs for sixteen elementary and high school districts in the western suburbs.

An important part of the department's program was pre-vocational guidance. Counseling, training, job placement, and a staff follow-up of the individual's progress was conducted to prepare the students for a productive and happy life. It was anticipated that the majority of the blind, deaf, and those with limited physical, emotional, and mental defects would become vocationally independent through the program of special education and pre-vocational services.

Improved testing, expanded curriculum are two main goals of Math Dept.

Under the direction of a new department head, Mr. Charles Stegmeir, the Mathematics Department continued to develop new approaches to the teaching of various levels of mathematics. Two primary objectives for the year were improving the testing system and expanding the department's curriculum.

Rather than hindering the department, construction proved a benefit in the form of new accommodations. New departmental offices at each campus provided needed space for mimeograph machines and additional conference rooms. The previously experimental use of overhead projectors which proved successful last year was continued, and new methods were devised for preparing transparencies. Teachers employed computers as educational devices in regular classroom situations to modernize the pupils' concepts of solving mathematical problems. The use of these aids enabled the mathematics department have a successful year.

Additional new classrooms increase Science Department effectiveness

Headed by chairman Donald Axelson, this year's Science Department ventured to provide a flexible approach to the study of science. Versatility in course sequence enabled students to take science as either curriculum enrichment or part of a college preparatory program. The accelerated program continued to allow qualified students to take a college credit chemistry course during their senior year. Members of Investigative Studies arose for the 7:30 a.m. class for the opportunity to develop individual scientific interests. Their resulting projects were later displayed at the Westinghouse Talent Search.

Space previously used by the now-departed junior college, the addition of two completed classrooms at North Campus, and the construction of an entire wing of fourteen new science rooms at South Campus added to the department's facilities. Occupation of these new classrooms was achieved during October and November.

New locations, curricula prompt changes in Arts Department

David Hagen

Space created by the construction enabled the Industrial Arts and Arts Department, directed by Mr. Richard Malone, to move to a more accommodating location this year. Before the department was able to expand, however, many adaptations had to be made. Teachers regarded the temporary space shortage as a challenge to their ingenuity as they planned their courses around these handicaps.

The Fine Arts Department converted the old ceramics room into a storeroom, so the number of project materials were necessarily decreased. Experimentation with the usual set-up of courses resulted in the selection of projects which were the least space consuming though still stimulating to the student.

At North Campus, the Industrial Arts Department moved into their new wing in the Vaughan Building. The process of moving was complicated by the problem of transporting 3,000 pounds of presses and over 5,000 pounds of type. Subjects also underwent revision and the department was able to offer a new course concerned with the study of natural and nuclear power. With many new pieces of equipment, the Arts Department offered a unique and practical curriculum.

Home Economics Department

Despite the many construction problems encountered this year, the Home Economics Department furthered its efforts to give its students foundations in home management. This year the department, headed by chairman Mrs. Iva Pidcock, experienced its largest enrollment, causing the various courses and facilities to be in demand more than ever before. The recently completed all-purpose room was used for a variety of activities, including home ec. club meetings, team teaching, and the showing of films. Plans were made for a small simulated home to be occupied eventually by the Advanced Foods, Interior Design, and Housing classes. Clothing and Textiles classes stressed creativity and practicality in the making of clothes. The Child Development and Family Relations classes were interested in the strengthening of family life. The Foods and Nutrition courses, in addition to emphasizing the necessity for proper food preparation, also stressed the importance of a balanced diet. In spite of the difficulties caused by the construction, the department continued its efforts to present meaningful and practical courses for its students.

Business Dept. profits from aquisition of new equipment

Headed by chairman Mr. Carl Nemecek, the Business Department expanded with increased enrollment and new facilities in the various subjects it offered, this year. Students who had completed fundamental courses were once again offered the opportunity to take more advanced classes and to eventually use their skills in work experiences. Realization of the expansion in the modern business world prompted the department to extensively incorporate new equipment in its curriculum. New electric typewriters became a necessary addition since a strong probability existed that typing students would need a knowledge of such equipment in future occupations. Different typing and accounting textbooks also contributed to the updating of the department. Data processing was greatly benefited by the addition of the newly completed rooms at North Campus. With these innovations, the department hoped to present a better foundation for those pupils with aspirations of success in business professions.

LT's complex computer equipment, part of the business administration classroom, gives students the practice which is essential in the modern professional world.

In an effort to adapt to the musical needs and talents of the students, the Music Department offered courses in band, orchestra, harmony, and various areas of vocal work. An addition to the department's staff, headed by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, was accompanied by a new course in vocal techniques, designed to give greater attention to individual instruction.

Concerts featuring both popular and classical music, as well as entertainment at athletic events, were given by each organization. Other undertakings combining the hard work and talents of the band, orchestra and choruses were the concerts at Christmas and in the spring, and the operetta. In a new program, Musicale, students were given the opportunity to perform for one another after school. The ultimate challenge for ambitious music students was participation in the state contest, where each musician was judged on the basis of performance, sight reading, and knowledge of scales.

On-campus range gives Drivers' Ed. students added self-confidence Construction has provided many rewards, as this year's Driver Education Department learned. A completely new section was added for the department at South Campus.

Classes continued to meet on the customary every-other-day basis. Students became familiar with traffic laws, signs, signals, and problems encountered while driving. Teachers attempted to present many foreseeable and avoidable hazards in an effort to increase traffic safety.

On days opposite the classroom sessions, students participated in simulator and range experiences. In the simulator, each student responded in his own "car" to the filmed traffic situations presented on the screen. Individual mistakes were mechanically recorded so that the student might become aware of his weaknesses and improve his skill. On the new on-campus driving range, the students drove without an instructor in the car with him. By using small broadcasting equipment installed in each car, the teacher was able to conduct the students through maneuvers from an observation booth. Once he received his permit, the pupil was finally allowed to drive along familiar streets for the first time. At the completion of all the available training, the student was prepared to practice and master the skills required to eventually obtain his license.

A simulator enables Mr. Johnson's sophomore student Dorsey Illingworth to practice hand-over-hand turns free from the hazards of driving a real car.

Swimming pool, new gyms increase curriculum of Phys. Ed. Dept.

This year the Girls' Physical Education Department, headed by Mrs. Bonnie Glick, has made several advancements. Additions included tennis at South Campus and a swimming pool at North Campus. A few of the year's activities were field hockey, basketball, golf, modern dance, gymnastics, and health education. The department also offers several extra activities for girls with a special interest. These activities range from GAA offices to the special job of being a leader on the sophomore, junior, and senior levels.

Improved facilities for this and future years overshadowed temporary difficulties in the Boys' Physical Education Department. Enlarged gyms and locker rooms accommodated classes of freshmen and sophomores each period at South Campus. At North Campus, completion of the swimming pool was anticipated by both the faculty and the students. Other than the possible addition of swimming to the program, chairman Lester Glick planned to follow the usual schedule of widely varying activities designed to combine physical fitness with enjoyable recreation.

With extensive interior and exterior changes at LT, students and staff alike had to make adjustments. Primary in their efforts to simplify the adaptation to the new facilities were the Service Personnel. The ordinary tasks of maintenance were compounded by the debris of the construction. The custodians and matrons strove to keep the physical plant of LT orderly by cleaning halls and rooms and repairing pipes and circuitry, always co-operating with the construction crews. Secretaries continued to type the necessary multitude of instructional material and administrative correspondence. Cafeteria workers faced the responsibility of serving larger classes at both campuses. Despite increased duties, the Service Personnel continued to serve LT by executing the many necessary chores which students and faculty too often take for granted.

CLAS

Speed marks the lives of all LT students. Freshmen enter South Campus full of expectations and doubts; but they are accustomed to their new surroundings within a month and learn the procedures almost as quickly. Sophomores, confident now that a majority of required courses have been completed, strive to gain as much leadership experience as possible in their head positions at South. North Campus demands re-adjustment of entering juniors, and soon after, the realization of fast-approaching post-high school careers. Seniors, stunned at the thought of a single remaining year at LT, seek to fulfill goals and to provide strong direction for underclassmen while anxiously awaiting the coveted acceptance notices from colleges and business firms.

Passes, schedules, locker combinations bewilder class of '72

Entering LT as many classes before it, the Freshman Class adjusted to new schedules and activities encountered after the change from elementary grades. Sponsors Mrs. Virginia Donahue and Mr. Francis Jakubka strove to begin a productive spirit which could be carried throughout the next three years by organizing a class board from comm. room representatives. During Homecoming newly-elected president Randy Wiersma headed his class in its first group effort at the class float and pep assembly. Thought then shifted to the December 13 Freshman Assembly, which gave the class a feeling of unity and provided a showcase for frosh talent. The traditional class party in February created a casual atmosphere in which class members could mingle with friends acquired during the first semester at LT. Several fund drives rounded out the year's activities. In the annual spring elections, the class used the experience gained during their initial high school year to elect the officers who would lead them when they assume the leadership at South Campus next September.

Year's experience gives sophs leadership, authority at SC

With a year at LT behind them, the Sophomore Class returned to South Campus with confidence and a greater desire to excel in both the classroom and extra-curricular activities. By serving as guides during registration, sophomores assisted the perplexed freshmen in locating books, classrooms, and lockers. Homecoming found the class constructing its float, "We come not to praise RB, but to bury them." Along with the intensification of class spirit, the sophomores added to their treasury by buying the greatest amount of Bennett Field plots during the week of Homecoming.

Under the leadership of president Hank Habicht, and sponsors Mrs. Cerveney and Mr. Cramer, the class chose its colors, navy blue and kelly green, and agreed on a '71 button vidual performance during the school year. The class party in February provided a chance to become better acquainted with fellow sophomores. At the end of the year, the Tab signing party brought the class together to complete its second year at LT. The sophomores left South Campus eagerly awaiting the move to North Campus.

By introducing many new projects this year, the members of the Junior Class showed their leadership and initiative. In the fall, questionnaires were filled out by the juniors in an attempt to discover the interests of each class member. Under the supervision of president Brent Costello and sponsors, Mrs. Ann Pepper and Mr. Kenneth Price, plans were carried through to adopt a constitution and to publish a junior class newspaper, "Lion's Tale," which relayed ideas and projects considered by the board. The "Lion's Tale" also featured "Junior Salute," recognition of an outstanding member of the Class of '70. Other plans included the possibility of a Junior Class Prom and class sweaters. Not only were the juniors innovators at LT, but they also showed their leadership in matters with other schools. In January, LT played host to the first meeting of the West Suburban Association on the Junior Class. The class ended the year by looking forward to next year, their senior year, with anticipation; but they also looked back at this year with satisfaction that it was an enjoyable, productive year for the Class of 1970.

Final year generates memories, speeds to Speed marked the Class of 1969's four years at LT, yielding the achievement and experience that have shaped the character of the class. Upon entering South Campus, they slowly began to form a unified group with the election of freshman class board members and officers. These representatives assumed the responsibilities of building the first class float and planning the class party and assembly. As sophomores they accepted many key positions at South Campus and selected orange and yellow as the colors for class buttons. Junior year brought new emphasis on college and vocational planning and testing. During the year they reached a milestone when the float "Lettuce Squash the Demons and Turnip Victory" brought '69ers their first award in Homecoming competition.

More than ever before, speed marked the senior year. The class was challenged to assume leadership in athletics, club activities, academic and special talent performances, and the government of the student body. They maintained some traditions, but also enhanced them with their own style. To finance the prom and senior week activities, class members sold Christmas cards, using part of the profit to pay for the class gift. Before receiving senior jerseys during Homecoming week, they changed class colors to navy and light blue. Later in the year, Senior Week was held, and included a breakfast, a student-faculty basketball game, and the class party, which brought '69ers together for the announcement of "senior superlatives." The year's activities and the events of four years at LT culminated in Senior Salute, Baccalaureate, graduation, and the Prom.

Acknowledgements

The 1969 Tabulae staff wishes to thank the American Yearbook Co. of Hannibal, Missouri, with special thanks to Mr. Doug Greir, Mr. Anthony Morrow, and Mr. Doug Groesbeck, as well as Wyckoff Studios, La Grange, especially Mr. Roger Wyckoff, Mr. David White, and Mrs. Mary Anne Deme, for their valuable assistance in the production of this yearbook and the employees of Prosch Pharmacy, La Grange, for their understanding in helping us mail materials.

Mr. James Bull, Advisor

Kathy -
Havent seen ya
much this year.
Good luck -

Peggy
Palmer

Kathy
It was fun in class Hope to see you next year.
Love
Barb Doster

Kathy -
Well, I first got acquainted with you by hemming one of your skirts!
I'm glad I got to know you personally. You are truly a great kid. Have a marvelous summer and don't work too hard.
See ya' next year!
Linda Katzenbach

or why? We could have shared looks or something this year. Please promise that you'll be come a model please don't let talent go to waste and don't change year
love always, Maria

Wasn't Mr. Bosley the greatest! So was philosophy.
I'll never forget our painting sessions. To think that we could come back in 25 years or so and go up there and see your sun on the wall! Good luck! Janet Baum

I hope to get to know you this summer. Since you are such a nice kid. Be good and don't try to stay clean as a puppy as a tough senior byle for a while but not too long I hope you live ya soon
well but so close

Love
Dave
